THE BLITZ

OCTOBER 21-25, 2014

THE VILLAINS

By Bob Epling (thecampusgame.com)

Been to a movie this week? Is so, you probably got a healthy dose of villains along with your popcorn. Bad guys (and girls) are run amok on the big screen right now.

Gone Girl, Dracula, Annabelle, The Maze Runner, Left Behind ... these movies feature more villains than the last time Nick Saban and Lane Kiffin sat down to lunch together.

Welcome back to THE BLITZ, your source for weekly college football news, information, and statistics, and the publication covering the good sport of college football.

Nick Saban probably ranks as the foremost villain in college football these days. He's won four national titles overall (three at Alabama and one at LSU), yet seems perpetually perturbed and sports a fuse shorter than a fifteen cent firecracker (he blew up last week when complaining about the expectations put on his Crimson Tide). His Bama teams, winners of three out of the past five national championships, are the closest program to a national nemesis since the old glory days of Notre Dame when everybody either loved or hated the Irish.

Former Tennessee (& USC) head coach Lane Kiffin might be seen simply as over-matched and petulant by many college football fans, but to the elephant-memory faithful in Knoxville this weekend, he will be about as popular as the Ebola virus. Keep in mind Kiffin is still loathed among Vols fans for bailing on Big Orange country several years ago. This Saturday he makes his first trip back to Neyland Stadium since jilting the Volunteers. It will not be a pretty homecoming.

Other villains anger other fan bases. Down in Florida, if head coach Will Muschamp still has a job by the time you read this, Gator fans may drain the Swamp. Florida got mashed 42-13 at home by Missouri just one week after the Tigers got shut out 34-0 (at home) by Georgia. Things are ugly in Gainesville and Muschamp is public enemy number 1. It is difficult to see him survive.

Up in the panhandle of the Sunshine State, Florida State continues on a path to another perfect season after escaping with a thrilling 31-27 victory over Notre Dame, but the Seminoles do so with a questionable character at quarterback and a head coach and administration employing enough denials to make Bill Clinton proud. From the outside, it seems head coach Jimbo Fisher and FSU higher ups are doing whatever it takes to keep Jameis Winston eligible until January. Winston would be suspended at many schools (see Georgia and Todd Gurley for example).

Of course if you think these guys are villains, just wait until the college football playoff selection committee announces the four teams and the major bowl lineup in early December. The first rankings from the committee come out October 28, and the gnashing of teeth shall commence.

Enjoy your villains this week on the big screen or the gridiron ... I'll take my popcorn buttered, salted, and served with an icy cold coke.

AROUND THE NATION

It is a relatively tame week. The ACC offers a nice Thursday night game between Miami and Virginia Tech. The SEC has several solid pairings, including the two Mississippi schools attempting to keep their unbeaten seasons intact. Ole Miss travels to LSU in a huge test, while Mississippi State plays at Kentucky.

In Big Ten country, Michigan State is very much in the playoff picture and the Spartans welcome in-state rival Michigan to East Lansing. Ohio State plays at Penn State in a prime time game.

Heading west, BYU and Boise State on the blue field is good Friday night viewing.

GAME-OF-THE-WEEK

OHIO STATE
AT PENN STATE

Ohio State travels to "Happy Valley" to take on James Franklin's Penn State Nittany Lions in a primetime rivalry game that will air nationally on ABC at 8:00 PM EDT.

Ever since the Buckeyes were upset by Virginia Tech, they have been dominate, having out scored their last 4 opponents 224-69. They are led by freshman QB J.T. Barrett who has thrown for 1,170 yards with 17 TD passes and just 1 INT during those 4 games.

Penn State has had 2 weeks to prepare to Ohio State, after having lost their last 2 games. James Franklin is recruiting great athletes and this program is definately on the rise. Penn State is 2 wins away from becoming bowl eligible which is really amazing considering what this football program has endured since 2011.

Ohio State leads the all-time series with Penn State 16-13. The Buckeyes have won 14 of the 21 games, since the Nittany Lions joined the Big Ten in 1993. Ohio State has also won the last 3 times that this rivalry has been played at Beaver Stadium.

Even though Penn State has had two weeks to prepare for Urban Meyer's Buckeyes, we think Ohio State has too many weapons and will come away with the victory.

ALL-TIME CONFERENCE CHAMPIONSHIPS

Below we have listed the schools and the total number of conference championships they have won in the history of all 10 current Division I Football Bowl Subdivision conferences. These totals include instances where there were ties and more than one school shared a conference title in certain seasons. These numbers include both current and former members of these conferences. We list the number of conference titles each school has won as well as the last time each school won at least a share of a conference title. Conference titles won in extinct & defunct conferences such as the SWC, Big 8, Big West and the WAC are not included. Current conf members in BOLD CAPS. Former members in Italics.
