FED. R. APP. P. 29(c)(1) AND 26.1 CORPORATE DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

The Yes On 1 Campaign is a non-profit, single measure state political campaign committee that is duly registered with the Tennessee Registry of Election Finance. It does not have a parent company, and no publicly held corporation owns 10% or more of its stock.

FED. R. APP. P. 29(c)(5) CERTIFICATION AND INTEREST OF
AMICUS CURIAE

Pursuant to Fed. R. App. P. 29(c)(5), the Yes On 1 Campaign certifies that no party or party's counsel authored this brief in whole or in part; no party or party's counsel contributed money intended to fund this brief's preparation or submission; and no person – other than the Yes On 1 Campaign, their members, or their counsel – contributed money intended to fund this brief's preparation or submission. An appendix listing the eight thousand eight hundred and fifty (8,850) individual Yes On 1 Campaign members who have signed their names in support of this brief is attached hereto as Appendix A. The Yes On 1 Campaign submits this brief as Amicus Curiae in support of the Appellants and urges reversal.

The Yes On 1 Campaign is the single measure political campaign committee that was principally responsible for supporting the ratification of proposed Amendment 1 to the Tennessee Constitution in the November 2014 statewide election. It boasts an informal membership of tens of thousands of supporters who collectively contributed to, voted for, and advocated in favor of Amendment 1's ratification. Many members of the Yes On 1 Campaign were also directly involved in the efforts that unfolded over the preceding decade to place Amendment 1 on the statewide ballot for approval by the qualified voters of Tennessee.

Significantly, in addition to supporting the ratification of Amendment 1, many Yes On 1 Campaign members did not support any candidate for governor in Tennessee's 2014 gubernatorial race. Thus, all Yes On 1 Campaign members who exercised their constitutional right not to vote in that contest have now been formally disenfranchised as a consequence of the District Court's order in this case. Accordingly, the Yes On 1 Campaign has a direct interest not only in supporting Amendment 1's ratification, but also in ensuring that the constitutional right to vote guaranteed to each of its members is fully protected.

INTRODUCTION

This is a case about abortion masquerading as an election law dispute. Fundamentally, however, this case seeks to determine the mechanism by which the people of the State of Tennessee may amend the Constitution under which they are governed.

On November 4, 2014, nearly 1.4 million Tennesseans took to the polls to vote on whether the Tennessee Constitution should be amended to foreclose a right to abortion.<sup>1</sup> In that election, approximately 53% of voters – an undisputed majority – expressed their support for proposed Amendment 1 by voting “yes” in support of its ratification.<sup>2</sup> Consequently, Amendment 1 was ratified in accordance with Article XI, Section 3 of the Tennessee Constitution, which has been interpreted consistently and in just a single manner for more than half a century. Thereafter, however, the losing side took to the courts to contest Amendment 1’s results based on a novel interpretation of Article XI, Section 3 that has never previously been advanced.

Anomalously, the challengers insisted that the minority view of 47% of Tennesseans must prevail over the majority view of 53% of Tennesseans because “certain votes in favor of Amendment 1 receive[d] disproportionate weight as compared to Plaintiffs’ votes.”<sup>3</sup> To remedy this supposed injury, the challengers proposed that the votes of all voters who had declined to vote in the governor’s race “should not be counted at all[.]”<sup>4</sup> Thereafter – in what may be the most sweeping act of state-sanctioned disenfranchisement since the Jim Crow era – the District Court ordered that the votes of tens of thousands of voters be disqualified on the basis that “voting for governor is a precondition to having a vote on an amendment count.”<sup>5</sup> Consequently, the Yes On 1 Campaign has filed this brief to ensure that the Tennessee Constitution is interpreted correctly and to protect its members’ constitutional right to vote from the District Court’s historic order disenfranchising them.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

Article XI, Section 3 of the Tennessee Constitution provides that: “if the people shall approve and ratify [a proposed state constitutional] amendment or amendments by a majority of all the citizens of the state voting for Governor, voting in their favor, such amendment or amendments shall become a part of [Tennessee’s] Constitution.” Id. The District Court interpreted this provision to mean that citizens lose their right to vote on state constitutional amendments if they do not first cast a vote in the governor’s race.<sup>6</sup> That conclusion, however, represents a serious infringement on the right to vote that mutilates the First Amendment and cannot withstand constitutional scrutiny.

Rather than punishing voters with disenfranchisement if they decline to support a gubernatorial candidate – a manifestly unconstitutional qualification on the right to vote – Article XI, Section 3 contains two separate requirements that do not offend any constitutional norms. First, voters must vote “in . . . favor” of a proposed amendment by casting more votes in support of the amendment’s approval than against it. Second, to be ratified, a proposed amendment must garner a majority of the total number of votes cast in the governor’s race.

Helpfully, this interpretation of Article XI, Section 3 is bolstered by several independent sources including binding judicial precedent and applicable legislative history.<sup>7</sup> Most importantly, however, this interpretation is compelled by Article XI, Section 3’s text, rendering further inquiry unnecessary. Specifically, because the canon of constitutional avoidance requires courts to interpret laws in a manner that avoids a constitutional conflict whenever possible, Article XI, Section 3 cannot be interpreted in the manner adopted by the District Court. The State's constitutionally sound interpretation must prevail instead.

The District Court also held that Tennessee's historical interpretation of Article XI, Section 3 violates the 14th Amendment.<sup>8</sup> This conclusion was in error as well. Contrary to the District Court's ruling, the 14th Amendment does not afford voters any right "to have an impact on the denominator used in determining whether a constitutional amendment obtained the threshold for passage."<sup>9</sup> If it did, then all elections in which something other than a bare majority is required for approval would be constitutionally infirm. Thus, this holding, too, merits reversal.

Finally, even if the District Court had correctly concluded that Article XI, Section 3 violates the 14th Amendment, the proper remedy was not to order the systematic disenfranchisement of thousands of voters who lawfully exercised their right to vote as they saw fit. Instead, the District Court should have elided the purportedly unconstitutional provision of Article XI, Section 3 that ties the threshold for ratification of a state constitutional amendment to votes cast in the governor's race.

For each of these reasons – (I) the District Court's erroneous interpretation of Article XI, Section 3; (II) the District Court's erroneous conclusion that Article XI, Section 3 violates the 14th Amendment; and (III) the District Court's selection of an improper remedy to address Article XI, Section 3's supposed unconstitutionality – the District Court's ruling must be reversed.

ARGUMENT

I. THE DISTRICT COURT ERRED IN HOLDING THAT ARTICLE XI, SECTION 3 STRIPS VOTERS OF THEIR RIGHT TO VOTE ON CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS IF THEY DECLINE TO VOTE IN THE GOVERNOR'S RACE.

In pertinent part, Article XI, Section 3 of the Tennessee Constitution provides that: “if the people shall approve and ratify [a proposed state constitutional] amendment or amendments by a majority of all the citizens of the state voting for Governor, voting in their favor, such amendment or amendments shall become a part of [Tennessee's] Constitution.” Id. Unfortunately, this provision was inartfully drawn. As the Chancery Court for Williamson County observed, for example, from a textual perspective, Article XI, Section 3 is susceptible to three conflicting interpretations.<sup>10</sup>

<sup>10</sup> See Williamson County Chancery Court No. 44460, Order Granting Summ. J., at 18-19 (Tenn. Ch., Apr. 21, 2016).

First, Article XI, Section 3 could mean that in order to be able to cast a vote on a constitutional amendment, a voter must first vote for the Governor. For self-evident reasons, however – namely, that it would be comically unconstitutional to compel voters to vote for a candidate whom they do not support as a prerequisite to being able to vote in an unrelated election – no party to this case supports this reading.

Second, Article XI, Section 3 could mean that in order to be able to cast a vote on a constitutional amendment, a voter must first vote for a candidate for governor. Both the Appellees and the District Court subscribe to this interpretation. However, for similarly self-evident reasons – namely, that it would be comically unconstitutional to compel voters to vote for a candidate whom they do not support as a prerequisite to being able to vote in an unrelated election – this reading of Article XI, Section 3 fails as well.

Third, Article XI, Section 3 could mean that to be ratified, a state constitutional referendum requires both: (1) more votes in support of ratification than against ratification, and (2) votes in support of ratification that amount to a majority of the total number of votes cast in the governor's race. The Appellants advance this interpretation, and the State of Tennessee has also consistently adhered to this interpretation since Article XI, Section 3's inception approximately half a century ago. For the reasons provided in the State's principal brief, this interpretation is also supported by significant legislative history, and Article XI, Section 3 has been understood in this manner by the voters of Tennessee in every state constitutional election held over the past sixty years—including Amendment 1. Most significantly, however, this interpretation of Article XI, Section 3 is compelled by its text, since it is the only possible reading that does not violate the Constitution. The Appellants' interpretation of Article XI, Section 3 should prevail accordingly.

A. The canon of constitutional avoidance requires that Article XI, Section 3 be interpreted in a manner that avoids a constitutional conflict.

A century of settled jurisprudence from the United States Supreme Court dictates that a law “must be construed, if fairly possible, so as to avoid not only the conclusion that it is unconstitutional, but also grave doubts upon that score.” See United States v. Jin Fuey Moy, 241 U.S. 394, 401 (1916); see also Clark v. Martinez, 543 U.S. 371, 380–81 (2005) (“[W]hen deciding which of two plausible statutory constructions to adopt, a court must consider the necessary consequences of its choice. If one of them would raise a multitude of constitutional problems, the other should prevail[.]”). Significantly, the Supreme Court has also referred to the canon of constitutional avoidance as a “cardinal principle’ of statutory interpretation.” Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 689 (2001) (quoting Crowell v. Benson, 285 U.S. 22, 62 (1932)). Thus, “where an otherwise acceptable construction of a statute would raise serious constitutional problems, the Court will construe the statute to avoid such problems unless such construction is plainly contrary” to legislative intent. Edward J. DeBartolo Corp. v. Florida Gulf Coast Bldg. & Const. Trades Council, 485 U.S. 568, 575 (1988).

This Court, too, has routinely invoked the canon of constitutional avoidance as a means of interpreting statutory text. See, e.g., United States v. Erpenbeck, 682 F.3d 472, 476 (6th Cir. 2012) (“[I]f a statute is susceptible of two plausible constructions, one of which would raise a multitude of constitutional problems, the other should prevail.”) (internal quotation marks and alterations omitted); Eubanks v. Wilkinson, 937 F.2d 1118, 1122 (6th Cir. 1991) (“Courts construe statutes to avoid constitutional difficulty when ‘fairly possible.’”) (quoting Crowell, 285 U.S. at 62). See also Disc. Tobacco City & Lottery, Inc. v. United States, 674 F.3d 509, 549 (6th Cir. 2012); Chelsea Cmty. Hosp., SNF v. Michigan Blue Cross Ass’n, 630 F.2d 1131, 1135 (6th Cir. 1980). Accordingly, if this Court is convinced that one proposed interpretation of Article XI, Section 3 would violate the Constitution while another proposed interpretation would not, then Article XI, Section 3 must be interpreted in the manner that avoids the constitutional conflict. Id. In this case, because the Appellees' interpretation of Article XI, Section 3 seriously infringes upon the constitutional right to vote while the State's interpretation does not, the State's interpretation must prevail.

B. The right to vote necessarily includes the right not to vote. Consequently, the District Court's interpretation of Article XI, Section 3 renders it unconstitutional.

The District Court fully embraced the Appellees' argument that under Article XI, Section 3, only citizens who participated in the governor's race had the right to vote on constitutional amendments.<sup>11</sup> The primary problem with this conclusion, however, is that it effects a severe restriction on voters' right to vote by conditioning that right upon their prior participation in the governor's race. Specifically, under the District Court's view, citizens must first vote for a gubernatorial candidate — even if they do not support any of the candidates listed — in order to be permitted to exercise their right to vote on proposed constitutional amendments.

For the reasons provided below, however, a wealth of authority establishes that such a "prior participation" requirement would be unconstitutional. As a result, because the Appellees' and District Court's proposed interpretation of Article XI, Section 3 creates an insurmountable constitutional conflict while the State of Tennessee's interpretation does not, the State's view must prevail. See, e.g., Jin Fuey Moy, 241 U.S. at 401; Edward J. DeBartolo Corp., 485 U.S. at 575; Erpenbeck, 682 F.3d at 476.

i. Constitutional Origins of the Right to Vote

The right to vote is derived primarily from the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of association. See generally John Doe No. 1 v. Reed, 561 U.S. 186, 224 (2010) ("We have acknowledged the existence of a First Amendment interest in voting . . . ."); Storer v. Brown, 415 U.S. 724, 756 (1974) ("The right to vote derives from the right of association that is at the core of the First Amendment, protected from state infringement by the Fourteenth Amendment.") (dissenting opinion). Importantly, freedom of association also necessarily includes the right not to associate. See Roberts v. U.S. Jaycees, 468 U.S. 609, 623 (1984) ("[F]reedom of association therefore plainly presupposes a freedom not to associate."); Rutan v. Republican Party of Illinois, 497 U.S. 62, 76 (1990) (holding that the First Amendment protects the right "to . . . not associate"). See also Grossart v. Dinaso, 758 F.2d 1221, 1229 (7th Cir. 1985) ("The specific associational right alleged is the freedom of political advocacy, and the correlative freedom to abstain from political advocacy. The latter freedom is necessarily implied from the former . . . .”). Thus, in addition to guaranteeing citizens a fundamental right of association, “[t]he first amendment also gives us the freedom not to assemble with those whose goals we do not share.” IDK, Inc. v. Clark Cty., 836 F.2d 1185, 1192 (9th Cir. 1988).

Implicit in the right to vote, of course, is also the right to have one’s vote counted. See Davis v. Bandemer, 478 U.S. 109, 124 (1986) (“[E]veryone ha[s] the right to vote and to have his vote counted.”). Moreover, “[t]he right to vote freely for the candidate of one’s choice is of the essence of a democratic society, and any restrictions on that right strike at the heart of representative government.” Reynolds v. Sims, 377 U.S. 533, 555 (1964). Consequently, the unencumbered right to vote that is guaranteed by the First Amendment has been accorded fundamental status. See Anderson v. Celebrezze, 460 U.S. 780, 788 (1983) (“[R]ights of voters are fundamental.”).

Under this framework, any alleged infringement on the right to vote requires a careful examination into “the character and magnitude of the asserted injury.” Id. at 789. When the right to vote is “subjected to ‘severe’ restrictions, the regulation must be ‘narrowly drawn to advance a state interest of compelling importance.’” Burdick v. Takushi, 504 U.S. 428, 434 (1992) (quoting Norman v. Reed, 502 U.S. 279, 289 (1992)). Additionally, when evaluating election law challenges under the Constitution, First and Fourteenth Amendment claims are reviewed under the same mode of analysis. See LaRouche v. Fowler, 152 F.3d 974, 987–88 (D.C. Cir. 1998) (“[T]he Supreme Court’s recent election law cases . . . treat [First and Fourteenth Amendment] claims using a single basic mode of analysis . . . .”) (citing Anderson, 460 U.S. at 787 n. 7 (“[W]e base our conclusions directly on the First and Fourteenth Amendments and do not engage in a separate Equal Protection Clause analysis.”)).

ii. Authority Declaring Prior Participation Requirements Unconstitutional

Unsurprisingly, given its close relation to the First Amendment’s guarantee of freedom of association, substantial persuasive authority establishes that the right to vote necessarily includes the right not to vote as well. In fact – with the sole exception of the District Court’s opinion in this case – every court that has considered whether voters may lawfully be compelled to participate in one election as a prerequisite to voting in another has forbidden such a practice. See In re Hickenlooper, 312 P.3d 153, 158 (Colo. 2003) (holding that a “prior participation requirement severely burdens voters’ First Amendment associational rights by unconstitutionally compelling voters to speak . . . .”); Partnoy v. Shelley, 277 F. Supp. 2d 1064, 1075–78 (S.D. Cal. 2003), as modified on reconsideration (Aug. 21, 2003) (holding that because a prior participation requirement would “compel them to vote on a separate issue upon which they do not wish to vote,” such a provision “violates [voters’] First Amendment Right of free expression”); Ayers-Schaffner v. DiStefano, 37 F.3d 726, 727 (1st Cir. 1994) (holding that “depriving a qualified voter of the right to cast a ballot because of failure to vote in an earlier election is almost inconceivable”). In fact, a citizen’s right not to vote is considered such an obvious corollary of the right to vote that the First Circuit has previously dismissed the District Court’s position on the matter as being “hardly worthy of discussion.” Id.

Predictably, a wealth of authority from related contexts supports this conclusion by analogy as well. See, e.g., Burdick, 504 U.S. at 438 (“Reasonable regulation of elections does not require voters to espouse positions that they do not support[.]”); Brannon v. Perkey, 31 S.E.2d 898, 902 (W. Va. 1944) (“In the exercise of the right of suffrage a voter is sovereign and has the right to vote or refrain from doing so. If it were otherwise the right would cease to be sovereign.”); Kansas City v. Whipple, 38 S.W. 295, 297 (Mo. 1896) (“[I]f suffrage i[s] a sovereign right of the citizen, he must be as free, according to the dictates of his own untrammelled will and conscience, not to exercise it as to exercise it on any particular occasion; otherwise the right is not sovereign.”); Bennis v. Gable, 823 F.2d 723, 731 (3d Cir. 1987) (“A citizen’s right not to support a candidate is every bit as protected as his right to support one.”); Welch v. Ciampa, 542 F.3d 927, 939 (1st Cir. 2008) (“The freedom not to support a candidate or cause is integral to the freedom of association and freedom of political expression that are protected by the First Amendment.”); State ex rel. O’Brien v. Kress, 142 W. Va. 475, 484 (1957) (“A voter is not required to vote for every office to be filled at an election.”); In re McDonough, 149 N.H. 105, 112 (2003) (“There is no provision in our laws requiring voters to vote for all offices in an election.”); Dunn v. Blumstein, 405 U.S. 330, 336 (1972) (“In decision after decision, [the Supreme] Court has made clear that a citizen has a constitutionally protected right to participate in elections on an equal basis with other citizens in the jurisdiction.”); Hill v. Stone, 421 U.S. 289, 295 (1975) (“[I]n an election of general interest, restrictions on the franchise other than residence, age, and citizenship must promote a compelling state interest in order to survive constitutional attack.”). Thus, the District Court’s contrary position in this case enjoys no doctrinal support of any kind.

The most recent case detailing the unconstitutionality of prior participation requirements – Hickenlooper, 312 P.3d at 160 – arose out of a pair of Colorado recall elections that were scheduled to be held in September of 2013. Hickenlooper resulted in an unequivocal holding that “a state’s prior participation requirement does not square with voters’ fundamental right to vote.” Id. In advance of the recall elections, Colorado’s governor sought guidance from the Colorado Supreme Court as to the constitutionality of a section of the Colorado Constitution which provided that “a vote for a successor candidate does not count ‘unless the voter also voted for or against the recall of such person sought to be recalled from said office.’” Id. at 157 (quoting Colo. Const. art. XXI, § 3). Thus, as in the instant case, the Hickenlooper court was tasked with evaluating the constitutionality of a provision that “condition[ed] a voter’s ability to vote” in one election on the voter’s prior participation in another. Id.

Upon review, the Hickenlooper court held unequivocally that such a prior participation requirement “cannot pass constitutional muster because it severely burdens voters’ First and Fourteenth Amendment rights.” Id. Specifically, the court held that Colorado’s “prior participation requirement severely burden[ed] voters’ First Amendment associational rights by unconstitutionally compelling voters to speak on the recall question.” Id. at 158. The Hickenlooper court also concluded that “the prior participation requirement . . . effectuates a severe restriction on citizens’ fundamental right to vote” in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment, since such a requirement “completely invalidates a voter’s otherwise legal ballot for a successor candidate where that voter simply fails—or chooses not—to vote on the wholly distinct recall issue.” Id. at 159. More fully, the court explained:

[T]he State’s prior participation requirement unconstitutionally compels voters to express a view on the question of whether to recall an elected official. The voter must espouse a position even if she categorically opposes the recall mechanism, or, more benignly, has no opinion on whether a candidate should be recalled. Accordingly, . . . the United States Supreme Court’s precedent (and common sense) make clear that virtually no regulation that compels voters to take a position can pass constitutional muster.

Precisely the same conclusion was reached by a federal district court in Partnoy v. Shelley, 277 F. Supp. 2d at 1076, just a decade earlier. In Partnoy, the District Court for the Southern District of California was tasked with evaluating the constitutionality of a provision of California’s election code that provided that: “[n]o vote cast in [a] recall election shall be counted for any candidate unless the voter also voted for or against the recall of the officer sought to be recalled.” Id. at 1071. The Partnoy plaintiffs were voters who contended that as a consequence of the prior participation requirement, “their rights under the First Amendment [were being] violated because they

[we]re being forced to speak on the recall decision despite their wishes not to do so.” Id. Thus, the affected voters sought an injunction that would relieve them of any obligation to vote in the upcoming gubernatorial recall election as a prerequisite to exercising their right to vote for a replacement candidate. Id.

Upon review, the District Court held that California’s prior participation requirement was unconstitutional because it “force[d] [voters] to take a position on the question of recall, of which the failure to do so results in the cancellation of their vote of who should be their governor.” Id. at 1078. Thus, the court held that such a requirement “violate[d] Plaintiffs’ First Amendment Right of free expression.” Id. In particular, the court explained:

Because section 11382 will effectively bar Plaintiffs from having their otherwise valid vote for a gubernatorial successor counted, or compel them to vote on a separate issue upon which they do not wish to vote, the Court determines that section 11382 effects a severe restriction on their Constitutional right to vote. Indeed, if Plaintiffs decline to vote on the question of recall as a protest of the recall process, they are denied the right to have their vote counted on the question of who shall govern them.

Id. at 1075. A permanent injunction forbidding California’s election officials from enforcing the prior participation requirement was issued accordingly. Id. at 1079.

Yet again, the same result was reached in a case out of the First Circuit a decade before that in Ayers-Schaffner v. DiStefano, 37 F.3d 726. According to the district court's summation, a primary election was held for the Warwick School Committee in Providence, Rhode Island on June 7, 1994. See Ayers-Schaffner v. DiStefano, 860 F. Supp. 918, 919 (D.R.I.), aff'd, 37 F.3d 726. The Board of Elections subsequently invalidated the election because several voters had wrongfully been permitted to cast two votes instead of one. Id. Accordingly, a new election was scheduled for July 19, 1994. Id.

Significantly, however, the Board instructed that participation in the new election would be restricted exclusively to those voters who had voted in the earlier June 7th election. Id. In response, voters who were disenfranchised by the Board's prior participation requirement argued that their right to vote had been infringed as a consequence of the Board's decision to restrict participation in the July election to those who had previously voted in June. Id.

Following full briefing on the matter, the district court granted judgment in favor of the disenfranchised voters on the bases that "[t]he Board completely denied the right to vote to otherwise registered and qualified voters" and that "[a] complete denial of the right to vote is a restriction of the severest kind.” Id. at 921. The First Circuit then affirmed the district court’s ruling in full, adding:

In its simplest form, this case asks us to decide whether a state may condition the right to vote in one election on whether that right was exercised in a preceding election. So stated, the case is hardly worthy of discussion. The right to vote is of the most fundamental significance under our constitutional structure, and depriving a qualified voter of the right to cast a ballot because of failure to vote in an earlier election is almost inconceivable.

Ayers-Schaffner, 37 F.3d at 727 (internal quotations and citations omitted) (emphasis added). The Board’s prior participation requirement was permanently enjoined accordingly.

On the District Court’s reading of Article XI, Section 3, this case is materially indistinguishable from the prior participation requirements that were invalidated in Hickenlooper, Partnoy, and Ayers-Schaffner. In fact, if anything, the prior participation requirement mandated by the District Court in this case is even more intolerable. In Hickenlooper, Partnoy, and Ayers-Schaffner, the litigants arguing in favor of the constitutionality of prior participation requirements could at least claim that the second elections at issue had some meaningful connection to the first elections upon which voters’ right to vote had been conditioned. In this case, however, the Appellees cannot even offer a colorable justification for conditioning voters’ right to vote on state constitutional amendments upon their support for a gubernatorial candidate. No such justification exists.

Moreover, even if a plausible connection between a vote for governor and a vote for a state constitutional amendment existed, such a connection would be insufficient to justify infringing upon the right to vote anyhow. See Hickenlooper, 312 P.3d 153; Partnoy, 277 F. Supp. 2d 1064; Ayers-Schaffner, 37 F.3d 726. As Hickenlooper, Partnoy, and Ayers-Schaffner make plain, prior participation requirements are categorically unconstitutional. Id. Additionally, a wealth of authority from related contexts compels the conclusion that voters cannot lawfully be compelled to vote in any other situation, either. See, e.g., Burdick, 504 U.S. at 438 (“Reasonable regulation of elections does not require voters to espouse positions that they do not support[.]”); Brannon, 31 S.E.2d at 902 (“In the exercise of the right of suffrage a voter is sovereign and has the right to vote or refrain from doing so. If it were otherwise the right would cease to be sovereign.”); Whipple, 38 S.W. at 297 (“[I]f suffrage i[s] a sovereign right of the citizen, he must be as free, according to the dictates of his own untrammelled will and conscience, not to exercise it as to exercise it on any particular occasion; otherwise the right is not sovereign.”); Bennis, 823 F.2d at 731 (“A citizen’s right not to support a candidate is every bit as protected as his right to support one.”); Welch, 542 F.3d at 939 (“The freedom not to support a candidate or cause is integral to the freedom of association and freedom of political expression that are protected by the First Amendment.”); O’Brien, 142 W. Va. at 484 (“A voter is not required to vote for every office to be filled at an election.”); McDonough, 149 N.H. at 112 (“There is no provision in our laws requiring voters to vote for all offices in an election.”). The District Court’s contrary conclusion fails accordingly.

Significantly, the scale of the proposed violation at issue in this case is also extraordinary. If the District Court’s interpretation of Article XI, Section 3 is affirmed, then the votes of tens of thousands of qualified voters – as many as eighty thousand, by some estimates<sup>12</sup> – will be subject to wholesale invalidation for no other reason than that the voters who cast them did not support any candidate for governor. Of note, the voters who are at risk of being disenfranchised as a consequence of the District Court’s order also span the political spectrum. For example, some voters – such as Dr. David Cassel and Mathilde Mellon – are longtime, ardent Democrats who could not bring themselves to support the Tennessee Democratic Party’s candidate for governor<sup>13</sup> and decided to skip the gubernatorial election as a result. See Affidavits of Tennessee Voters, RE 125-2, PageID #3095-3098 (“I have been a member of the Democratic Party since 1968, and I have never switched my party affiliation. I did not have a Democratic gubernatorial candidate whom I could support in good faith in 2014. I declined to vote in the governor’s race.”); (“I am a progressive Democrat. Other voters – such as Aurora Wright, Miriam Thompson and Donald Thompson – are longtime Republicans who were “dismayed by much of what Bill Haslam had done in office and [who] could not in good conscience vote for him.” Id. at #3099. <sup>13</sup> The Tennessee Democratic Party’s candidate for Governor in 2014 was widely panned by local and national media as someone who was not credible. See, e.g., Caleb Hannan, The Alvin Greene of 2014: Meet Tennessee’s accidental Democratic nominee for governor, a 72-year-old hunter who didn’t do any campaigning, SLATE (Aug. 10, 2014), http://www.slate.com/articles/news\_and\_politics/politics/2014/08/charlie\_brown\_democratic\_candidate\_for\_tennessee\_governor\_the\_72\_year\_old.html. As a result, some of the most prominent members of the Tennessee Democratic Party actively encouraged other Democrats not to vote for him. See, e.g., Andy Sher, Cohen urges votes for Hooker in governor’s race, TIMES FREE PRESS (Oct. 7, 2014), <http://www.timesfreepress.com/news/local/story/2014/oct/07/cohen-urges-votes-for-hooker-in-governors-race/268944/>.

ballot blank.”); id. at #3104 (“I did not vote for Governor Bill Haslam or for Senator Lamar Alexander, because I do not feel they represent my concerns and convictions. In November 2014, I did not cast a vote for any statewide office.”).

Still other voters – such as Jennifer Hay and Sarah Pope – eschewed voting in the 2014 gubernatorial race for other reasons or for personal reasons that they have every right not to explain. Id. at #3106 (“I deliberately chose not to vote in the [2014] governor’s race because I didn’t support any of the candidates.”); id. # 3108-3109 (“In the November 2014 election, I voted solely for the “yes” selection on Amendment 1 and none of the other contests. I believe it is my right to vote for whomever and whatever I chose to vote for on the approved ballot.”). Regardless of their individual reasons for declining to vote in the 2014 governor’s race, however, all voters who skipped the 2014 gubernatorial race but voted on Tennessee’s proposed constitutional amendments have two things in common: (1) they lawfully exercised their right to vote; and (2) the District Court ordered that their lawful votes be disqualified.

In sum, based on the rank unconstitutionality of prior participation requirements, the District Court’s interpretation of Article XI, Section 3 “would raise a multitude of constitutional problems . . . .” Clark, 543 U.S. at 380–81. Accordingly, the canon of constitutional avoidance compels the conclusion that the State of Tennessee’s historical interpretation of Article XI, Section 3 – which contains no such constitutional infirmities – “should prevail” instead. Id. at 381.

II. ARTICLE XI, SECTION 3 DOES NOT VIOLATE THE 14TH AMENDMENT TO THE U.S. CONSTITUTION, BECAUSE THE CONSTITUTION DOES NOT PROVIDE ANY RIGHT “TO HAVE AN IMPACT ON THE DENOMINATOR USED IN DETERMINING WHETHER A CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT OBTAINED THE THRESHOLD FOR PASSAGE.”

The District Court also held that “the method used to tabulate the votes on proposed Amendment 1 in the 2014 Election was fundamentally unfair and violated Plaintiffs’ due process rights . . . under the Fourteenth Amendment because their votes were not accorded the same weight as those cast against Amendment 1.”<sup>14</sup> Specifically, the District Court contended that “an opponent of Amendment 1 . . . was compelled to vote in the Governor’s race in order for his or her vote to have an impact on the denominator used in determining whether a constitutional amendment had obtained the threshold for passage.”<sup>15</sup> Thus, the District Court concluded that Article XI, Section 3 – as that provision was interpreted by the State of Tennessee – was unconstitutional because “[t]hose who opposed Amendment 1 likely felt compelled to vote for governor.”<sup>16</sup> This reasoning fails as well.

Most significantly, Amendment 1 opponents had no right – constitutional or otherwise – to have an impact on the denominator used to calculate the necessary threshold for ratification.<sup>17</sup> See Gordon v. Lance, 403 U.S. 1, 6 (1971) (observing that “any departure from strict majority rule gives disproportionate power to the minority”); Griffin v. Burns, 570 F.2d 1065, 1079 (1st Cir. 1978) (explaining that “the Constitution protects the right of all citizens to democratic processes, not the right of any particular candidate or voters to a certain result”). If such a right existed, then all elections in which something other than a bare majority is required for approval would be constitutionally infirm. Id. A few simple examples demonstrate why.

The conclusion that every vote must equally impact the denominator used to determine whether a measure prevails is easily exposed by reference to any election in which something other than a bare majority is required for approval. Take, for example, a situation in which a two-thirds majority is required to approve a ballot measure. In such a case, “yes” votes and “no” votes do not carry anywhere near the same impact on the threshold for ratification, because for every “no” vote cast, supporters would require two “yes” votes to overcome it. The same is true, for example, of an election in which a 60% majority is required for passage. See, e.g., Fla. Const. art. XI, § 5(e) (“[I]f the proposed amendment or revision is approved by vote of at least sixty percent of the electors voting on the measure, it shall be effective . . .”). There, too, “no” votes carry significantly more weight than “yes” votes, because for every “no” vote cast, one-and-one-half “yes” votes are needed to obtain ratification. In fact, mathematically speaking, any deviation from strict majority rule places voters on unequal footing with respect to their “impact on the denominator used in determining whether a constitutional amendment had obtained the threshold for passage.”<sup>18</sup>

<sup>17</sup> Voters do, of course, have a fundamental constitutional right to affect the numerator that is used to calculate votes for or against a particular outcome in keeping with the “one person, one vote” principle.

Given this reality, are all elections unconstitutional when something other than a bare majority vote is required? Of course not. As noted, the Supreme Court has readily acknowledged that “any departure from strict majority rule gives disproportionate power to the minority.” Gordon, 403 U.S. at 6. However, it has never indicated or even intimated that such departures violate the 14th Amendment. To the contrary, the Supreme Court has observed that “there is nothing in the language of the Constitution, our history, or our cases that requires that a majority always prevail on every issue.” Id. Thus, there is certainly no constitutional requirement that a minority of voters must prevail on any issue. In other words: “the Constitution protects the right of all citizens to democratic processes, not the right of any particular candidate or voters to a certain result.” Griffin, 570 F.2d at 1079.

Consequently, voters have a right to affect only the numerator used to calculate votes for or against a particular measure. They do not have any right to have an equal impact “on the denominator used” to calculate the necessary threshold for ratification.<sup>19</sup> The District Court’s contrary conclusion that Article XI, Section 3 violates the 14th Amendment fails accordingly.

III. EVEN IF ARTICLE XI, SECTION 3 VIOLATED THE 14TH AMENDMENT, THE REMEDY THAT THE DISTRICT COURT SELECTED WAS IMPROPER.

For the reasons provided in the preceding section, Article XI, Section 3 does not violate the 14th Amendment. However, even if did, the remedy that the District Court selected to cure Article XI, Section 3’s supposed infirmity was improper.

The specific harm advanced by the Appellees and accepted by the District Court was that voters who opposed Amendment 1 “likely felt compelled to vote for governor” in order to ensure that their votes “count[ed] more.”<sup>20</sup> Inexplicably, however, the District Court attempted to “cure” this supposed harm by in fact compelling every voter to vote in the governor’s race. Compounding this error, the District Court also enforced such compulsion retroactively and stripped voters of their right to vote on constitutional amendments if they failed to anticipate it—thereby ordering the systematic disenfranchisement of tens of thousands of voters who lawfully exercised their constitutional right to vote as they saw fit.

To say the least, this remedy was improper. Instead, if the provision of Article XI, Section 3 that ties the threshold for ratification of a constitutional amendment to the total number of votes cast in the governor’s race is unconstitutional, then the District Court should simply have severed it. Thereafter, the remainder of Article XI, Section 3 should have been given effect.

Federal courts are empowered to determine whether an unconstitutional provision of state law can be severed. See Brockett v. Spokane Arcades, Inc., 472 U.S. 491, 506 (1985). In so doing, federal courts are instructed to apply substantive provisions of state law. Leavitt v. Jane L., 518 U.S. 137, 139 (1996) (“Severability is of course a matter of state law.”). Accordingly, Tennessee’s law on severability governs the applicable inquiry. Id.

Although applicable to the Tennessee Code only, Tennessee law contains a general severability statute that establishes a presumption in favor of severance. See Tenn. Code Ann. § 1-3-110 (“It is hereby declared that the sections, clauses, sentences and parts of the Tennessee Code are severable, are not matters of mutual essential inducement, and any of them shall be excinded if the code would otherwise be unconstitutional or ineffective.”). Severance is also governed independently by Tennessee’s common law doctrine of elision, which “addresses itself to the question of legislative intent.” Hobbs v. Lawrence Cty., 247 S.W.2d 73, 76 (Tenn. 1952). Pursuant to that doctrine, “a court, under appropriate circumstances when consistent with the expressed legislative intent, [may] elide an unconstitutional portion of a statute and find the remaining provisions to be constitutional and effective.” State v. Tester, 879 S.W.2d 823, 830 (Tenn. 1994).

Although the Tennessee Supreme Court has held that “[t]he doctrine of elision is not favored” as a judicial matter, see Gibson Cty. Special Sch. Dist. v. Palmer, 691 S.W.2d 544, 551 (Tenn. 1985), “[t]he general rule is that where a clause is so interwoven with other portions of an act as that we cannot suppose that the Legislature would have passed the act with that clause omitted, then if such clause is declared void, it renders the whole act null.” Hobbs, 247 S.W.2d at 76. Thus, the essential question with respect to severance in this case is whether the component of Article XI, Section 3 that requires “a majority of all the citizens of the state voting for Governor” to support a proposed amendment is “so interwoven” with the remainder of Article XI, Section 3 that its framers would not “have passed the act with that clause omitted.” Id. Amicus Curiae respectfully submits that it is not.

As noted, Article XI, Section 3 contemplates two separate requirements for a proposed constitutional amendment to pass. First, it requires more “yes” votes in support of the amendment’s approval than “no” votes against it. Second, it requires votes in support of ratification that amount to a majority of the total number of votes cast in the governor’s race. Significantly, however, only the latter requirement is claimed to be unconstitutional.

Given that failing to sever the second requirement of Article XI, Section 3 would have the consequence of subverting the will of a significant majority of Tennessee voters, it is difficult to imagine that this provision could be considered “so interwoven” with the remainder of Article XI, Section 3 that its framers would not “have passed the act with that clause omitted.” Hobbs, 247 S.W.2d at 76. Tennessee’s history and public policy reflect uniquely strong deference to principles of democracy and popular will. See, e.g., Tenn. Const. art. I, § 1 (“[A]ll power is inherent in the people.”); State v. Hester, 324 S.W.3d 1, 81 (Tenn. 2010) (“At the core of our representative democracy is the principle that the people are the ultimate sovereign. Therefore, the courts must give full effect to the will of the people, expressed through laws duly enacted by their elected representatives, subject only to the limitations imposed by the federal and state constitutions.”). Notably, given Tennessee’s celebrated history as the birthplace of Jacksonian Democracy and the “increased democratization of the American political process” that it represents, this commitment is also unsurprising. State v. Rice, 279 P.3d 849, 859 (Wash. 2012). Consequently, it seems unlikely that the framers of Article XI, Section 3 would have preferred the wholesale invalidation of Tennesseans’ popular will to mere severance of the offending constitutional provision.

As a result, the District Court should have severed the purportedly unconstitutional provision of Article XI, Section 3 that ties the threshold for ratification of state constitutional amendments to votes cast in the governor’s race. Thereafter, it should have given effect to the remaining provision of Article XI, Section 3 that requires majority support for a proposed constitutional amendment to be ratified. Applying this remedy to the instant case, because 729,163 voters – an undisputed majority encompassing 53% of the electorate – expressed their support for proposed Amendment 1 while only 657,192 voters opposed it,<sup>21</sup> Amendment 1 should be declared ratified, and the District Court’s order should be reversed.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Amendment 1 should be ratified, and the District Court’s order should be reversed.
