

Edith Hoover has experience providing benefit support for individuals with intellectual disabilities in her community. She has served as an organizational representative payee for many beneficiaries monitoring their accounts. She has experience in HUD guidelines and residential coordination. While assisting beneficiaries in maintaining their benefits she has become a believer in the importance of financial independence for individuals with disabilities. Her goal is to assist individuals and their families in understanding the work incentives Social Security provides while encouraging employment. She has been trained through Virginia Commonwealth University as a Community Work Incentive Coordinator. She can be contacted at edie.hoover@fullcircledc.com.
