

Native Californian Jeane Harvey sang professionally until she met her future husband. She composes poetry and is writing a creative nonfiction book based on her early life— The Valley of Yesterday. Her father had been a motion picture art director at Universal Studios and Warner Brothers. Her mother graced the silent screen, and brother, Kay Kuter, was a popular character actor in films and on TV. Jeane's book is about her upbringing as the daughter and brother in California's San Fernando Valley.
