FEATHERS IN THE WIND

It seems like such a short time ago when my Oma had her gall bladder surgery, but now that I do the math it was over 50 years ago.

What an upheaval that caused in the house. It meant that my aunt and my mother took turns daily being driven to Mercy Hospital in Cedar Rapids to be with Oma all day long.

You see those were the days when German mixed with English was the norm so a lot of the older generation (when they were hospitalized) would get confused and the next generation was there to "translate."

This was also the time when Class A Stock was in full force and many of the people coming from the Amanas benefitted.

My relatives, like I'm sure many others, thought it was a good idea to bring baked goods to the nurses. The idea was that by doing this the nurses would stop in more often to check on the patient and thus get a "reward" of a piece of cake, cookie or whatever. Trust me, it worked!

Then, around 10 our local doctors came around to check on the "locals" in the hospital. These men not only went to the hospitals, bur (hold on to your hats) made house calls plus regular office visits.

How they managed all that still baffles me although I suspect their wives were valuable members of the team doing whatever was needed to make sure the doctor had as much time to see patients as possible.

I remember so well the steady ticking of the clock in the reception room at Dr. Moershel's while I waited for the dental appointment, or to get a shot.

There was the one time my sister shoved a button up her nose. There we sat waiting to have the button removed from my screaming sister's nose (She always liked to put on a show).

We sat in a row - Daddy, Mommy holding a squirming little girl yelling that she could not breath and me who was contemplating the stick of "Juicy Fruit" gum we would get once the dumb button was out.

Who stuck a button in their nose anyway? Obviously she was as stupid as I had told my parents over and over again, but they wouldn't listen!

No, they never listened to my wonderful advise beginning with telling them we didn't need another child around. I could not be improved upon so why bother.

Support for Dan Ray and Family How Can You Help?

A heartfelt show of support for one of the community's big hearted volunteers and friends – Dan Ray.

Amana friends of Dan Ray, Middle Amana, have started a fund at the Bankhaus, Amana and on Go-FundMe with the goal of helping the Rays with medical expenses, rehab and other expenses following his recent heart transplant.

Dan Ray is back home after a 101 days in hospital and in a rehab care facility. He received a heart transplant at the University of Iowa on June 1 after a May cardiac arrest led to heart failure. Eventually a heart transplant was required. Further medical complications after the transplant made his recovery even more difficult.

As friends wrote on the GoFundMe page, "Dan has been an important member of the Amana community for 42 years. He's worked at the Amana Furniture shop for the entire time he's lived here, dedicating his life to making furniture. He's been involved with Boy Scouts, the (Amana) Land Use District, 4H, AYSO soccer, and lots of community events. He is hardworking, witty, kind, and never misses an opportunity to crack a joke. He enjoys gardening, woodworking, taking care of his Purple Martins, beekeeping, birdwatching, and spending time with his family. If you know Dan and Angela, you know that they are very kind and generous people. They have experienced a horribly traumatic event and appreciate all the support from their community. This has been extremely hard for them emotionally, physically, and financially since neither of them have been able to work and won't be able to for a while. This Go Fund Me will aid the Rays with medical expenses related to his heart transplant, rehab, loss of income and expenses that will follow post-transplant."

It's easy to find the GoFundME page. Simply go the GoFundMe.com and search for "Dan's New Heart" or Dan Ray. Or you can stop by the Bankhaus on Main Street in Amana to deliver a check or cash for the Dan Ray Medical Fund.

As John and Julie Zuber wrote on the Go Fund me page, "Thank you in advance for your support. This has been an extremely trying time for the Rays and they appreciate all of the support. There are so many people to thank that have helped during this time, so know that the Rays are beyond grateful for everyone who has aided them during this time."

Amana's Great Change - It's Been 90 Years Part 2

This is the second in series of stories about Amana's Great Change, the 1932 decision to set aside Amana's communal way of life and seek a new future for the community. By Emilie Hoppe.

They decided to take it to the community.

On March 16, 1931 Amana's governing board, the Board of Trustees, at the urging of Dr. Noe and the others, agreed that the residents should be told of the financial situation. A committee was appointed and noon meetings were held in each of the seven villages to explain to the members the community's position.

Rudolph Blechschmidt, East Amana, a 22-year old school teacher at the time, said in a 1981 interview with me, "When I looked at the facts and figures in 1931, I knew that things couldn't go on...I was in favor of it (The Great Change). There was no other wav."

In South Amana, A.T. Berger, also a village schoolteacher agreed telling me, "I was 24 years old then. . . It was getting so that the thing was undermining itself. In the Depression you could easily see the thing could not last. But the people didn't realize that a change was necessary. . ."

No. 29

That spring of 1931 the Board of Trustees arranged for community elections to be held and each village, elected 1 man per 50 residents to serve as village delegates on a committee to examine the issues in depth. This was the first time non-elders were eligible to be elected to positions of leadership within the community.

Historian Peter Hoehnle has reviewed materials from these meetings. He explained in an article he wrote about the Great Change, published in the Winter 2001 "Annals of Iowa" historical journal, "The 47 men elected to the committee shared several broad characteristics. Ranging in age from 21 to 60, the committee was unusually young, with an average age of 40, far lower than that of the church trustees' average age of 62. A large number of committee members had spent time outside the Society.'

Several had trained for jobs outside Amana. Carl Eichacker, for example, had been to New York City to learn to be an undertaker. A.T. Berger had been to the state teacher's college. Others, like Fred Blechschmidt, East Amana, had traveled as salesmen in Anyway, there we sat when "that child" sneezed and the button flew from her nose.

As it flew across the so did my dream of getting any gum. Another reason to put a yet another mark against that "child."

Our parents took us out to the truck and home again.

I liked going to the doctor (when I wasn't sick) so when Oma got out of the hospital it was sort of a "let down" to return to regular day to day life.

THE ACLUD CORNER

Did You Know?.... The Amana Colonies Land Use District was created and approved by the State of Iowa House and Senate. It was signed into law in 1984. It is unique in that it is the only Land Use District in the entire State of Iowa. It operates via a small fee assessed as property tax paid by Amana Colony residents and collected by Iowa County. The Land Use District via the application of its' ordinances helps protect the Amana Colonies' status as a National Historic Landmark. This is because the ordinances' overarching principle is to preserve the historic character and integrity of the community appearance and culture. ACLUD ordinances are overseen and managed by the Administrator and volunteers who are elected to various positions.

the wider world. Some had friends outside Amana, like Carl Flick whose friendship with the artists of Cedar Rapids had opened doors for him in lowa galleries and studios. These young men who had seen something of the world were among those chosen to lead the community forward.

The Committee of 47 met for the first time May 2, 1931 in Amana at the Pitz meeting house (one of the smaller churches used for evening prayers). One of the first things they did was set up a ballot so that the membership could vote on the prospect of change. William Noe and Peter Stuck drafted a ballot and a letter that would be sent to each member in order to determine if the committee had a mandate to move forward.

This spring 1931 ballot showed that support for reorganization was strongest in South, West Amana, Amana and Homestead. In those villages 96 to 93 percent of the membership wanted change. In East Amana 66 percent voted for change, while in High Amana 52 percent did so. In Middle Amana only 25 percent of the residents were in favor of change when asked that first time in 1931.

In Middle Amana where community cohesion was especially tight and where Elder John Heinemann strongly opposed the dissolution of the communal order, they were staunch. Some felt that God had called them to remain true to the communal way. Others felt that Amana or Homestead pushing the agenda. They spoke up in a village meeting and voted in favor of keeping the communal ways and against the prospect of change. Doing so unleashed a bit of a furor as the other villagers felt they were dragging their heels. A derisive poem by an anonymous poet made the rounds which stated (in German) "In Middle the status quo is good enough as long as there is something in the jug, as long as the bacon is rich, as long as the living is easy. . . so one continues free of care until all is gone and great the need, the jug is empty, and the bacon is gone. . . When this has come to pass, one will hear the cry, 'Why O Why did I vote NO when, with mocking scorn, rejected the Reorganization." (One year later, in the spring 1932 when the next vote came up, most Middle residents had changed their minds or at least had agreed to go along with the plan as proposed, so by then 89 percent of Middle voted in favor of a proposed reorganization plan.)

In the spring of 1931 with a majority in favor of change, the Committee of 47 felt they had a mandate to look for a solution to the problems facing the community. During the next few months they met often, broke into sub committees, sought legal advice and carefully planned for the future.

Studying their proceedings three remarkable things are evident:

- First, the committee members were nearly unanimous in their belief that re-organization was needed.
- Second there is no record of any one at any time suggesting that the society simply dissolve and the members be left to shift for themselves. Instead the goal was to reorganize in an orderly fashion that would protect the youngest, the oldest and the least able.
- Finally, they were able to craft a plan and set it all into motion within six months.

Six months. Consider that it took the Clear Creek and Amana School Districts about 3 years to become CCA and that it took well over 2 years to develop the concept and the legal foundations to construct the Amana Colonies Land Use District. And neither of those important, community-changing transitions is as complicated and complex as the formation of the new structures that would be the basis for the Amana community post 1932.

Certainly they had a strong head start as a few of them had been thinking of this for a several months, perhaps as long as a year, but the fact of the matter is, they worked hard, long hours, long days, almost nonstop for six months because the clock was ticking. Dr. Charles Noe, Peter Stuck, F. William Miller and others knew that if they didn't get this set up and running quickly, Amana would fail to meet financial obligations and forced to sell off assets and thus jobs would be lost and the people would be forced to leave their homes. So they got to work and they worked fast.

Next week read what happened next in what has to be called a remarkable year in Amana history.
