A Bright and Loving Way That Brings Peace

Parents Who Learn The News

When parenting is complicated with the news of a poor prenatal diagnosis, the medical focus shifts from the baby (for whom is no treatment or cure) to a clinical perspective which views the pregnancy as a condition requiring intervention. The parents become confused, grieved and in shock. They need help and support.

We want to help and support you in this difficult time of life.

We follow the Be Not Afraid model. BNA is a long standing perinatal hospice service which understands the challenges parents face. <http://www.benotafraid.net/Home>

“The BNA support and care we found helped by not turning us away from the truth of what was happening, but instead showing it to us and going there with us. I don’t have the words to express my gratitude”...

What Happens?

Parents may feel they aren't given the option to carry to term. They lose precious time that they might have had if they had not terminated. They miss the joy their baby would give if allowed to live, even for a brief time.

The Answer:

Give yourself the gift of time with your baby. Let Courageous Heart give a supportive base for you during your pregnancy and birth of your baby. Time with your baby can be cherished and precious.

Every child is a precious treasure and worth fighting for; they are a gift! Genetic defects never change their value.

Courageous Hearts focuses primarily on providing support as needed, helping parents find ways to cherish and celebrate the life of their baby, no matter what the diagnosis, and prepare them for birth..

Courageous Hearts Supports:

1. A listening ear and help in making plans to celebrate the baby's life during pregnancy and birth.
2. One-on-one support to assist in developing a comprehensive birth plan.
3. Resource material to support families throughout their pregnancy and following birth
4. A network of support from volunteers and peers who have compassion and understanding as you experience new territory.
