ASCE HAWAII SECTION JANUARY DINNER MEETING NOTICE

Program: Hawaii Undersea Research Laboratory Submersible Operations

The Hawaii Undersea Research Laboratory (HURL) specializes in providing scientists with the tools and expertise they need to investigate the undersea environment, including submersibles, remotely-operated vehicles, and other cutting-edge technologies. HURL was formed as part of NOAA's National Undersea Research Laboratory through the University of Hawaii in 1981 and operated with NOAA base funding until 2012. This presentation will cover the evolution of submersible operations at the Hawaii Undersea Research Laboratory over the last 3½ decades, as well as the submersibles' capabilities and the unique and varied missions the submersibles have been involved in.

Speaker: Terry Kerby, Director of Facilities & Submersible Operations, Hawaii Undersea Research Laboratory, University of Hawaii.
