POLITICAL CONSULTING WITH ONE ANIMAL WORLD

Every problem facing animals in our society is related to the actions of people and people are guided by a set laws and social expectations set forth, in part, by our political leaders. The love and concern that people have for animals is often mistaken for a cute hobby or an odd obsession and nothing could be further from reality.

Animal people are voters and they are devoted advocates who dedicate their time and resources to inspiring compassion. They believe in personal responsibility, kindness, community service and often consider their pets a “member of the family”.

Working with One Animal World, political candidates and leaders have an opportunity to gain a solid understanding of the animal related challenges in their communities. Animal issues often have a notable impact on a working budgets and are tied to public health and safety issues as well as social trends and violence.

Working with aspiring or established political leaders, One Animal World analyzes a specific region and then crafts a political position that demonstrates a viable path to reducing animal cruelty, neglect and homelessness.

People care about animals and it's time for political platforms to reflect the interests and concerns of the 70% of American households that include companion animals.
