The following was written by John Fiore as a forward to the Family Cookbook in 1993:

I guess my daughters asked me to write a forward to this cookbook because they know how much I loved growing up in a loving, close-knit family. A big part of that was the fantastic food my aunts prepared, and the sheer joy of many, many people laughing, drinking and eating like royalty.

When I think about it, the family is just like a great meal. You don't just make pasta. You create a sauce, spice it, add bread and a little vino. It takes a lot of ingredients to make a family. All of us have, excluding spouses of course, Fiore blood. But the nine Fiore brothers and sisters brought some other ingredients to the family...Perrotti, Ruio, McParland, Rowe, Long, Fitzgerald, Juniec, Searing and Jamison...all were added to the mix. Then the next generation, and the next, bring their own flavoring, making us an "American Stew," but glad for the Italian start. Many are gone, but not forgotten, so enjoy what the Fiore do best. BuonAppetito!
