ABOUT STERLING GLOBAL

While working as a contractor in New Orleans, Robert Delaney III noticed that most of the construction workers on his site would carry around a personal supply of baby wipes. He found this odd, and decided to ask some questions. By the end of the day, Robert learned that durable, portable, fresh wipes was the best way to stay clean while at work or while traveling (in his case, both were one and the same).

Now an ardent sanitary wipe consumer, Robert identified a bad recurring issue with each of the different brands he sampled: Bad packaging. The wipes would dry out and render them useless.

Armed with an idea, he created prototype containers that kept the wipes fresh without sacrificing portability.

Robert's colleagues (along with their families) reacted very enthusiastically, praising the increased durability and shelf-life of his design. The rest is history!
