Executive Chef Jordan Salvador took questions from the residents:

- 1) Residents prefer a wedge rather than a slice of lemon with their fish.
- 2) Resident said for 5 years he has eaten totally undercooked vegetables. His wife said her brussell sprout was so undercooked that she couldn't stab it with her fork. Jordan says vegetables should be cooked al dente and Michael offered that whether it is undercooked or overcooked is a matter of personal taste and we can't please everybody.
- 3) Resident said the soups are excellent.
- 4) Another resident said we need truth in advertising. If it says grilled asparagus on the menu it should be grilled. Instead they got mushy boiled asparagus for dinner and perfectly parboiled asparagus as breakfast.
- 5) Resident commented on the saran wrap around the fresh fruit to keep it more sanitary.
- 6) Option two. If you have a favorite recipe you'd like served for dinner, let Chef know and he'll try to add it to the menu. Someone asked for Southern food and another said she's share her Hungarian goulash recipe.
- 7) Resident felt chicken marsaile on the menu was not authentic. Michael noted that both chefs can cook but they can't use alcohol, so recipes need modified.
