WASTE FOR USE

Community Forum for Sharing Ideas About Ecological Issues

Article Submission Guidelines

We're excited that you have considered contributing to the Waste for Use Community Forum for Sharing Ideas about Ecological Issues. Before you get started, we'll share a few things that might be helpful.

Our Objective
Waste for Use operates to conduct activities that aid with maintenance of a healthy natural environment. We pursue our organizational objective by advancing public awareness about environmental issues. The writing contributions that support the community forum for sharing ideas about ecological issues help advance our mission. If you are interested in sharing informative information about ecological issues, you might like to share information in our forum.

What we are looking for
We look for articles of informative content related to ecological or environmental topics. Topics may directly or indirectly address a broad range of ecological or environmental issues and themes such as environmental science, critical perspectives including environmental injustice, political economy, capital, social power, and a range of more topics.

For each article, we are looking for 1 - 8 pages, single-spaced (10-12 font size). Please proofread articles. Articles must thoroughly employ citations where applicable to support information included in writings (facts, quoted statements, theories, or concepts should be cited)

Submission Review Process
Articles are reviewed through a peer review process. Presently, we have limited staff resources, so we ask that articles be thoroughly proofread before submission. Our article review cycle is 15-30 days following article receipt. We will contact writers for accepted submissions. Please send article submissions to give@wasteforuse.org.
