

In addition the World Stamp Community took notice

The teachers shared the stamp designs the students produced with the Bramalea Stamp Club members and the members were extremely impressed and passed the positive outcome to various other Societies, including the Royal Philatelic Society. Because of the success and quality of the stamp designs produced by the students in 2016, a representative sample of the designs was taken by members of the Bramalea Stamp Club and Kathy Hartley, the Vincent Graves Greene Philatelic Research Foundation Librarian to the World Stamp Show in New York City to showcase before world-wide collectors.

The initiative and student stamp design story were showcased in an article in the Canadian Stamp News in 2016 and in the Canadian Philatelist.

Kathy Hartley provided the students and school with feedback about their artwork and the whole initiative from the New York Show which in turn thrilled the children.
