

Keystone Utilities Industry Partnership

Structuring a Superior Workplace

The Keystone Development Partnership (KDP) is a non-profit organization that coordinates the Utilities Industry Partnership. KDP creates joint labor-management training consortia to utilize an economy of scale. This provides training programs maximum value for every dollar. KDP offers sector partners an extensive range of industry expertise, cost effectiveness, and self-sustainability for their program activities.

Underwritten by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry, KDP assists industry stakeholders in creating and governing the Industry Partnership, developing training programs, career ladders for incumbent employees, and a pipeline for new hires.

Employer Engagement: Through its affiliation with the Pennsylvania AFL - CIO, KDP has partnered with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) in the energy sector and the Utility Workers Union of America (UWUA) as well as other unions in the water sector. These links to organized labor allow KDP to engage new employers for labor-management training partnerships, as well as further enhance existing programs.

Confronting Workforce Attrition

Utility companies employ thousands of workers in the Commonwealth and are facing increasing retirements for highly skilled workers. They are struggling with applicants who often lack skills and experience. KDP is prepared to make available to these challenged companies joint training and skill building programs. This will produce career ladders for less experienced members of their workforce. KDP brings together government, education, and community organizations as a pipeline to employers who need to fill entry level job vacancies.

KDP Created Utilities Industry Partnership for Energy and Water Systems

The Keystone Utilities Industry Partnership was formed in 2006 to address the crisis in workforce demographics faced by energy providers in Southwest Pennsylvania. Working with the IBEW, the Keystone Utilities Industry Partnership includes employers in power generation and transmission. In its first year, the Utilities Industry Partnership expanded statewide. As of May 2008, partners and participants include Duquesne Light Energy, Sunbury Generation, and PPL.

The water production and distribution sector is experiencing similar workforce challenges. The Industry Partnership outreached to water sector employers. Pennsylvania American Water and the UWUA were the first to participate. The Utilities Industry Partnership subsidized classes for PA American Water employees. This included training and testing for Class E Water Distribution Certification which produced a pay increase for some employees.

A model for sharing resources: The Keystone Utilities Industry Partnership statewide program is now viewed by participants as a model for sharing resources. KDP is planning to expand the Utilities Industry Partnership to include the gas sector.
