“The Language-Literacy-Dyslexia Connection: Speech-Language Pathologists on Board!”

Speech-language pathologists (SLPs) have an exciting opportunity to support students with language-based learning disabilities, including dyslexia. In recent years, there has been increased attention focused on effectively meeting the needs of students with dyslexia at state and national levels. SLPs are well equipped to support these students both through direct intervention and through collaboration with teachers and other professionals on inter-professional literacy teams. The purpose of this workshop is to provide an overview of the recent California dyslexia guidelines and legislation and how school-based SLPs can play a role in the prevention, identification, assessment, and treatment of students with dyslexia and other types of language-learning disabilities. Practical ideas and resources will be shared to help facilitate connections between the skills that SLPs possess and how they may be applied to support struggling readers.
