

Grant Writing – Getting It Right Series

- ① Grant Writing – Getting In Right: Are you a small or mid-sized 501(c)3? Are you a new or growing nonprofit organization? Do you work for or volunteer with a charitable organization that could benefit from additional funding? Do you know how to write a grant proposal that gets funded? Register now...
- ② Mission Statements and Needs Statements: Mission Statements are the all-important first impression of a grant proposal, as well as the introduction to your organization. Getting it right is crucial. Needs statements set the stage for your project or program. The Needs Statement must be carefully crafted, fact-based, and compelling. Register now...
- ③ Programs/Projects Descriptions: How do you answer the what, why, who, when, where and how of your project creatively and succinctly, and within word or character limits? Register now...
- ④ Financial & Budget Presentations: Financials and budgets are the necessary evils of grant proposals! They can be tedious, confusing, and just plain scary unless you know the simple truths of what funders want to see. Register now...
- ⑤ Storytelling and Attachments: Telling your organization's story, whether its history or activities, can transform a followed-the-guidelines proposal into a winning-because-we-knew-where-to-put-the-good-stuff proposal. Persuasive and program-driven storytelling can be a part of almost every component of a grant application, including attachments, if you know how to incorporate the compelling information. Register now...
- ⑥ Research Methods & Resources for Grant Proposals: Funding opportunities do not show up and knock on your door. Research is necessary to discover and vet prospective funding. Research is also necessary to communicate fact-based needs, objectives, and outcomes in grant proposals. Grant research is more than a Google search. Register now...
- ⑦ Developing a Funding Strategy for Your Organization: A comprehensive, deadline delineated, practical funding strategy will create sustainability and credibility for your organization, as well as projects and programs. Register now...
