

GEARIN' UP

For the Backcountry

Caribou Gear Game Bags

Call me weird, but of all the products I checked out, this one was one of my favorites. Why would someone get excited about a game bag? It turns out I wasn't the only one; a bunch of other veteran hunters stopped to check it out as I visited with the owners. The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation will also be adding it to their catalog in 2011. What separates this game bag from the others is a combination of light weight and excellent durability. The bags are constructed of a light-weight woven nylon fabric - a no-see-um mesh on steroids. The bags have excellent tear resistance, yet are thin enough that they fold up very small. From backstrap and tenderloin sizes all of way up to a full-body elk bag, they make a size for every job. The bags can be purchased individually or in packs. The small combo pack is for deer or antelope-sized animals and has a camp meat bag, a bag for the cape, a meat parts bag, and four quarter bags. A quarter bag will easily hold all of the meat from a boned out mule deer, and at only four ounces, you'll hardly notice it in your pack. www.big-gamebags.com MSRP $69.99

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON

FILL THE VOID IN A FATHERLESS BOY'S LIFE.
BE A MENTOR FATHER.

Let God transform your outdoor passion into a Kingdom pursuit - rescuing a lost, abandoned boy, introducing him to his Heavenly Father and His Great Outdoors. This is such a critical need and yet so easy to do...

Fathers in the Field, is a Christian ministry that works within your church pairing Christian outdoorsmen with abandoned boys in your neighborhood. Our turn-key program is simple, fun and life-changing. What are you waiting for, visit our website today.

All that's missing is YOU. www.fathersinthefield.com

