AMANA NEWS AND NOTES

Your Clip and Save 2020 Special Events List

In the Amanas this year there are lots of entertaining public events scheduled through December. Here's a rundown of what's on the schedule so far, but more events will be added as the year progresses. Here are the highlights:

The all new Quilt Amana will debut April 2 – 6 at the Price Creek Event Center hosted by Price Creek and Heritage Designs Quilting and Needlework. This will be multi-day event drawing upon our heritage of quilting plus celebrating contemporary quilting of all types with an exhibit, sale and pre-sale dinner for quilt fans. Check with Heritage Designs for details.

Yes, the Iowa Renaissance Festival is returning to the Middle Amana Park for two weekends of fun. The magic makers will be here Memorial Day and the weekend after the same as last year as apparently last year's rain didn't slow them down much.

The Handworks people will be back in Amana with a big show here on Labor Day weekend, Sept. 4 – 5. Expect large crowds for this hugely popular, upscale cabinetry tool show/ sale with lectures and more to be held in the Festhalle and other sites in Amana. When last they were here several years ago they brought a loyal following of woodworking "by hand" fans.

Because Handworks will be here, the Amana Arts Guild's Woodfest is on hold one year. The annual event is under new management assisted by the Amana Arts Guild board and they hope to have a new and improved festival rolled out in 2021.

Amana Society, Inc. memo to the community regarding water quality.

On February 15th, the Cedar Rapids Gazette published an article titled Amana Wells at High Risk which was a follow up to the January 6th article about high nitrates in the Amana water system. We want to reiterate that no water has been provided to the community that doesn't meet safety standards.

It's important to note that the nitrate levels below 10 milligrams per liter is considered safe and at no time have nitrate levels in water delivered to the public exceeded this level. We take exception to the article reference to "industrial waste" used in the article to describe products we spread on the fields. The products are manufacturing by products that have been found to be beneficial to soil health. We sometimes spread ground-up cardboard, which is biodegradable, helps the soil retain moisture and is used as a liming agent that balances the pH of the soil. The other is a biodegradable liquid that has necessary crop nutrients, and used in lieu of other chemicals. It is approved by the State of Iowa Department of Agriculture and Land Stewardship and is classified as a fertilizer.

The Amana water system is supplied through 6 wells but can meet the needs of the community using as few as two. The water supplied to the public is always a blend of the wells that feed the system and that blend always had nitrate levels well below 10 milligrams per liter. We have currently shut down 3 of the wells, two that tested high and a third that tested borderline. We currently operate with 3 wells that have never tested high. Additionally, we are working to bring back online a 4th well, located in Main Amana, that has never tested high. This has allowed us to take the 3 wells in question offline for the foreseeable future while maintaining capacity to provide the community with water from wells that have never tested high.

The Amana Society takes this issue very seriously and to reiterate, the water supplied by the Amana Service Company to the community meets safety standards. We have been and will remain proactive in working with experts in the field on ways to always improve what we do in the interest of safety in the community.

Sincerely,

Greg Luerkens

FEATHERS IN THE WIND

Do you remember the advice column “Dear Abby?”

When I was young, we got the Iowa City Press Citizen, for two reasons I felt. That column and the movie listings.

It seems as if every weekend we would get at least two or three phone calls just to find out what movies were playing and the times in Iowa City.

I, on the other hand, felt I was becoming an extremely sophisticated teenager by reading Abby’s advice.

I now knew that kissing a boy on the first date was considered “fast and loose,” and they guy would think you were “easy.” Even kissing on the second date was not “correct,” but watch out for that third date!

Now, looking back, I wonder if this was written for the mothers more then the girls.

This was also the age when women would write in who “suspected” that their sons or daughters were living with one another in college.

They (the parents) had been pretending not to notice, but now a holiday was coming up and the son/daughter was bringing a friend home to meet the family.

Oh, what to do? Should separate bedrooms be offered and the ruse continued or what? What would the cousins, aunts, and uncles, neighbors, etc. think? How could all this be explained?

Then there was the “problem” of when a girl should wear make-up or how short or too short a skirt or dress? What about what was an appropriate gift to give a girl... certainly not lingerie, but then how much should one spend?

These “problems” seemed to be of no consequence when my dating days began. I guess the problems “Dear Abby” confronted are small now that I am older... it was fun reading the column though.

Charlemagne’s first gift to me was a box of comb honey from his bees [be my honey, birds and the bees anyone] which he wrapped in a brown paper bag.

I was underwhelmed. He also took me to softball games (no cost) and “McDonalds,” but he showed me love, which was priceless.
