The Parish

A parish is a “certain community of the Christian faithful stably constituted in a particular Church, whose pastoral care is entrusted to a pastor as its proper pastor under the authority of the diocesan bishop” and “also with the cooperation of other priests or deacons and with the assistance of lay members of the Christian faithful, according to the norm of law.” It initiates the Catholic people into the ordinary expression of the liturgical life, teaches Christ’s saving doctrine, and is the place where the Lord’s charity is practiced in good works and fraternal love.

A parish is above all the place where the faithful can be gathered together as a community. This happens above all when the people respond to the call of Christ’s Church to come together for the Sunday celebration of the Eucharist, in which the faithful form a “Eucharistic community”, so that they may give thanks to God and offer the unblemished sacrificial Victim not only by means of the hands of the priest but also together with him and so that they may learn to offer their very selves.

Within this “Eucharistic community”, a solemn duty lies with the pastor “to see to it that the Most Holy Eucharist is the center of the parish congregation of faithful.” This is for the spiritual benefit of the faithful who belong to that parish, but also because the parish, in fact, represents the universal Church and also the archdiocesan Church gathered at a given time and place. This is particularly true in the communal celebration that takes place on Sunday, the Lord’s Day, revered by the Church as the day of Christ’s resurrection and as the weekly Pasch.

As a community, sustained by the power of love flowing from the Eucharist, the Sacrament of Charity, all Catholics of the parish should, moreover, take care to show their deep religious sense and their charity toward brothers and sisters who participate with them in the same celebration. They should avoid any appearance of singularity or division, keeping in mind that they have only one Father in heaven and that they are therefore all brothers or sisters one to the other.
