The Berlin Candy Bomber

Uncle Wiggly Wings

In 1948, after Germany was split up among the winners of World War II, Russia decided to cut all rail and transport routes to Berlin. That's when the U.S. and the other Allied nations began "Operation Little Vittles", also known as the Berlin Airlift. Military planes spent a year dropping food on the city of Berlin. Now the city was getting everything it needed, except one essential thing -- candy. Because what he was doing was against regulations, Halvorsen was told to stop. That is until the higher-ups realized how much Germany loved them for doing this. That's when the Air Force deployed a BUNCH of planes whose sole purpose was to shower West Berliners with tons and tons of candy donated by the American Confectioners Association.

Even when the airlift ended in 1949 after the Soviets finally gave up, the Berlin children never forgot about Uncle Wiggly Wings. Halvorsen is still known throughout Germany for what he did for the children of Germany.

Utah-born Air Force pilot Gail Halvorsen was moved by the sight of a bunch of candyless children in Berlin and gave them a pack of gum he was carrying, promising he'd return the next day with more sweets. So Halvorsen began dropping chocolate on the children in handkerchiefs as little parachutes. He'd wiggle the wings of his plane so the kids would recognize him and brace themselves for the chocolate rain, earning him the name "Uncle Wiggly Wings."

FACTS of the Korean War 1950-1953

- The Korean War began as a civil war between North and South Korea, but the conflict soon became international when, under U.S. leadership, the United Nations joined to support South Korea and the People's Republic of China (PRC) entered to aid North Korea. The war left Korea divided and brought the Cold War to Asia.
- In the United States, we call it the Korean War (and sometimes the Forgotten War). North Korea calls it the Fatherland Liberation War. In South Korea, it's called Six-Two-Five, after the day it started. China's subtle name for the conflict is the War to Resist U.S. Aggression and Aid Korea.
- On July 27, 1953, American Lieutenant General William Harrison, Jr. and North Korean General Nam Il signed the Korean Armistice Agreement, ending "all acts of armed force" in Korea, until both sides were able to find a "final peaceful settlement." The agreement was notably not a peace treaty, but rather, a ceasefire. Sixty years later, it seems we are no closer to a peaceful ending of the conflict.
- The U.S. Army used approximately 1,500 dogs during the Korean War and 4,000 in the Vietnam War.
- An estimated 86,300 Korean War veterans are women, making up 7% of the estimated number of all female veterans.
- Johnny Cash turned 18 in 1953 and enlisted in the US Air Force on July 7, 1950, just twelve days after the outbreak of the Korean War. He was stationed in Germany where he served as a Morse Code intercept operator. While over there, he started playing guitar, and formed his first band, the Landsberg Barbarians. He befriended a fellow soldier named BJ Carnahan, and the two of them played all the songs they knew on guitar together and started writing their own songs.

A little-known hero of the Korean War has been immortalized by a statue. The mare known as "Sgt. Reckless" brought ammunition to soldiers during the war and carried wounded men off the battlefield. The heroic horse is on display in the National Museum of the Marine Corps.

A Soldier's Prayer

Dear Lord,
 Keep me by the arm
 You bear,
 And direct a path
 Through harms way.
 Help me know that
 You're always there,
 Guiding me
 By night and by day.
 And Lord, at moments
 When I'm feeling lonely,
 And temped with
 Discouragement at my post,
 Help me lean
 Mightily on You only
 Because it is You
 I depend on the most.
 When I long to see my family
 Or start thinking of Times with a friend
 I'll know that
 You're always with them
 Even after
 Absence is at an end.
 Shield me as
 I answer duty's call,
 For I have a job
 From which I can't depart.
 Protect me from my enemy,
 Who'd have me fall
 For it is You
 Who guards my life
 And heart. Amen.

Stories that deserve to be retold

Lt. Commander Robert W. Goehring, aboard the Coast Guard Cutter U.S.S. Duane, was swept off his ship by a mountainous wave during a storm. The ship was turned around to rescue Goehring when suddenly another giant wave tossed him back on board to safety.

Joe Frank Jones of the Eighth Army Air Force fell 13,000 feet and suffered no broken bones. Returning from his 22nd mission over Germany in a Fortress, he collided in mid-air and fell 13,000 feet in the severed tail section of his plane without serious injury and no broken bones.

Bob Weiland, who lost both legs in 1969 in Vietnam to a land mine while trying to save a fellow soldier, "walked" 2,000 miles from California to the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, D.C., in 1986 propelling himself on his padded knuckles.

Pvt. William Parker, a soldier in the U.S. Army fighting in Vietnam, survived after a shot to his head was deflected by the bible he kept underneath his helmet.

Although the involvement of The American Red Cross in hostilities preceding World War II was evident as early as 1939, after the attack on Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, the Red Cross quickly mobilized a volunteer and staff force to fulfill the mandates of its 1905 congressional charter. That mandate required that the organization "furnish volunteer aid to the sick and wounded of armies in time of war" and to "act in matters of voluntary relief and in accord with the military and naval authorities as a medium of communication between the people of the United States of America and their Army and Navy." At home, millions of volunteers provided comfort and aid to members of the armed forces and their families, served in hospitals suffering from severe shortages of medical staff, produced emergency supplies for war victims, collected scrap, ran victory gardens, and maintained training programs in home nutrition, first aid, and water safety. Overseas, Red Cross workers served as field directors providing compassionate support for the troops they accompanied, operated clubs and club mobiles for the armed forces, and were attached to military hospitals, hospital ships, and hospital trains.

At the peak of Red Cross wartime activity in 1945, 7.5 million volunteers along with 39,000 paid staff provided service to the military. Throughout the war years, the Red Cross served 16 million military personnel, including one million combat casualties. By the time World War II ended in September 1945, the American public had contributed over $784 million in support of the American Red Cross. Nearly every family in America contained a member who had either served as a Red Cross volunteer, made contributions of money or blood, or was a recipient of Red Cross services.

"The Red Cross, with its clubs for recreation, its coffee and doughnuts in the forward areas, its readiness to meet the needs of the well and to help minister to the wounded... has often seemed to be the friendly hand of this nation, reaching across the sea to sustain its fighting men."

Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, Address to Congress, June 18, 1945

FACTS OF THE VIETNAM WAR 1955-1975

The Vietnam War lasted for nearly 20 years and spawned many movies, books, musicals, and of course, emotionally charged Vietnam War songs. The conflict officially ended in 1975.

- ◆ Nearly two-thirds of the American men serving the war were volunteers.
- ◆ The Vietnam War is the longest war in the entire U.S history.
- ◆ Slinkys were used in the Vietnam War as mobile radio antennas. They would sling the Slinky over branches and extend the range of their radios.
- ◆ Approximately 12,000 helicopters saw action in Vietnam (all services). After the war, the USS Midway crew pushed $10 million worth of helicopters into the sea so that a Cessna full of evacuees could land on the deck.

◆ Back home, the musical soundscape of the Vietnam War was strikingly different from the music that accompanied World War II. While there were patriotic songs that did very well, most notably Staff Sergeant Barry Sadler's million-selling number-one hit "Ballad of the Green Berets" in 1966 and Merle Haggard's "Okie from Muskogee" in 1969, the vast majority of Vietnam War songs fell into the category of "anti" rather than pro-war songs.

- ◆ Boxer Muhammad Ali was one prominent American who resisted being drafted into service during the Vietnam War. Ali, then heavy-weight champion of the world, declared himself a "conscientious objector," earning a prison sentence (later overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court) and a three-year ban from boxing.
- ◆ The movement against U.S. involvement in the Vietnam War began small, among peace activists and leftist intellectuals on college campuses, but gained national prominence in 1965, after the United States began bombing North Vietnam in earnest.
- ◆ The Vietnam Veterans Memorial was built without government funds.

WAR TIME COOKING

Times were hard during World War II both on the battlefield and on the home front. A person couldn't just walk into a store and buy as much sugar or butter as they wanted. These items were rationed. You were only allowed to buy a small amount (even if you could afford more).

The government introduced rationing because certain items were in short supply. Some things were scarce because they were needed to supply the military; gas, oil, metal, meat and other foods. Some things were scarce because they normally were imported from countries with whom we were at war or because they had to be brought in by ship from foreign lands.

Sugar and coffee were very scarce. Coca-Cola stopped production during the war because sugar in great quantities was not available. Everyone was given a ration book that contained ration stamps for different items. Grocers and other business people would post what your ration stamps could buy that week, but it was up to the individual to decide how to spend the stamps and possibly save items for certain recipes.

Several "war time" cookbooks were published and recipes were modified to help the cook who had limited quantities of rationed ingredients.

The Navajo Code Talkers

The United States was in serious trouble. Following the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor, Japan held the upper hand in the Pacific. Japanese soldiers, educated in the U.S., could speak English fluently. They routinely intercepted and decoded American military messages. The U.S. needed what has always eluded a country at war: an unbreakable code.

In February of 1942, Philip Johnston, a civilian engineer and World War I veteran, had an idea. What if America's military forces were to use the Navajo language as the basis of a secret code? Johnston knew something about that language as he was the son of missionaries to the Navajo people. He had spent most of his life on or near the reservation. He was one of about 30 non-Navajos who could speak the unwritten, extremely difficult language.

Writing a letter outlining his thoughts, Johnston set in motion a life-changing event for 29 Navajo men living on their ancestral homelands. Within months, those men would use their language to develop a code that was never broken during the war.

It remained a national secret until 1968. The movie "Windtalkers" is based on these men.

WOMEN ON THE HOMEFRONT

American women played an important role back home during World War II. When the war began, quickie marriages became the norm, as sweethearts married before their men went overseas. As the men fought abroad, women on the Home Front worked in defense plants and volunteered for war-related organizations, in addition to managing their households.

When men left, women cooked and cleaned, managed the finances, learned to fix the car, worked in a defense plant, and wrote cheerful letters to their soldier husbands. Rosie the Riveter helped assure that the Allies would have the war materials they needed to defeat the Axis.

At the war's end, although many women wanted to keep their jobs, those jobs went back to men returning home. The nation, it seems, was not yet ready for the greater social equality that would slowly come in the decades to follow.
