Andrea Sauchelli, Artist

Andrea Sauchelli, Within, Oil

Andrea Sauchelli was surrounded by art and design as she was growing up. With her parent's fondness of both traditional and contemporary styles, corresponding furniture and artworks decorated and furnished their home. Tables were embellished with various art books and design magazines, allowing for enjoyment and sparking creativity at all times. She finds inspiration from artists like Anselm Kiefer and Richard Diebenkorn, but her greatest influence is her father. Raised around his work with industrial design and spending time in his design shop, she learned to play and create. Always equipped with a pen in hand, he leisurely sketched on things anywhere he went, encouraging her to follow in his footsteps.

She was born in Columbus, Ohio, but received her BFA from Rochester Institute of Technology in New York. Just in the past four years, Sauchelli has been in many exhibitions throughout New Jersey and the United States.

Mainly working in oils, Sauchelli also incorporates pencil and oil pastel while additionally experimenting with India ink on mylar. Drawn to the richness and intensity of the ink, she adds it to collaged images that were previously made out of various cut up shapes and uses it or a marker to join it as one composition. Process and surprise play a huge role in the artwork, ultimately guiding the entire direction of a piece.

The Biologics exhibition consists of pieces from her Mylar Series and Interior Series.

Inspiration for the Mylar Series stems from the sweetness and kindness of childhood and the unanticipated darkness that they may face. The Interior Series is influenced by “the effects of medicine and the environment on the body.”
