

Dear Revamp Clients and Friends,

It is officially springtime, but the rain is cramping my shoe style! My boots are still in the front of the closet and my sandals are peeking through from behind. I believe it is time to make the switch and when I do, I will clean out. Spring break is over so it is prime time for some spring cleaning, or Revamping. Getting rid of the old, and rethinking current pieces so they work with today's styles will get your summer off to the right start. There is no reason to move that stained, white cotton skirt to the front of your closet again this year when you know you won't choose it!

It is not too late to organize before the summer. In fact, this is a great time because it is before you are forced to pack for a summer trip or need to find a particular spring outfit. I am happy to work with you with your transition into a new season. Call me to set up an appointment for now or for September when I can help you update and streamline your fall wardrobe.

Happy spring!

Warmly,
Beth
