

Sometimes our best efforts at doing good aren't appreciated. In fact, we have a saying, "No good deed goes unpunished." Such is the economy of good deeds when thankless people squander our gifts with ingratitude. But the economy of benevolence works the other way too. Often our smallest gestures pay large dividends. A kind word, a smile, a handshake, an appreciative note, a thoughtful gesture in season can be used by the Lord to (as we say) "make someone's day." Small kindnesses can bring large returns. Once when some of us, responding to an "altar call," stood in front of the church, I laid my hand on the shoulder of a man I didn't know, and blessed him silently. He later testified that he had been very depressed; and "when Brother Kirby touched my shoulder my depression left." That was like getting credit for tossing a penny to a hungry beggar.
