

Meth Lab Busted in Chiefland; Cookers Arrested

Klayton Adams

Two Chiefland residents were arrested by the Levy County Sheriff's Office Monday on charges of operating an active methamphetamine lab in their home.

Klayton Adams, 34, and Calah Crandall, 24, were arrested after deputies stumbled on their active "cook" operation while investigating recent vehicle burglaries.

Deputies contacted Crandall and she gave consent to search the home for stolen property. Deputies recognized numerous chemical components used to manufacture methamphetamines.

Containers of combined ingredients were found in the home after a more extensive search. The discovery also required activation of the Chiefland Fire Department Haz-Mat Unit. Deputies specially trained in the dismantling of methamphetamine laboratories were sent to safely collect the evidence.

Crandall is being held at the Levy County Jail on $115,000 bond and Adams is being held on $180,000 bond.
