

Qwote and Bahja Rodriquez Sign with Play Celebrity Games For Production of Game Apps

Stimulating Software Launches Five New Mobile Game Apps

San Diego CA – Thursday, February 11, 2016 - InCapta, Inc. (OTCPK: INCT), and its subsidiaries Play Celebrity Games and Stimulating Software, announce that Qwote and Bahja Rodriquez have signed to have Play Celebrity Games produce and launch game apps for their fan base.

Stimulating Software launched five new mobile game apps that are available to install in the app stores of Google, Apple, Amazon and other stores internationally. The company is excited to see its mobile games apps reaching the public.

Qwote commented: "I am excited to work with Play Celebrity Games and look forward to expanding the way in which my fans can interact with me."

Both of the mobile game apps will be developed by the Stimulating Software programmers and launched through Play Celebrity Games.

When asked, Bahja Rodriquez stated: "I am so excited to create an application with Play Celebrity Games. My fans love to engage in fun and exciting mobile games and applications and I can't wait to introduce them to my new application."

John Fleming, CEO of InCapta, commented on behalf of the Company's subsidiaries: "It's been a great week for our companies. Between signing two celebrities and launching five new apps for our followers the Company is beginning to show our business model. The new games KickiCon, 4_1, 4_2, Zombie Sniper and Zombie Sniper SS1 are all available on iTunes, Google and Amazon." Mr. Fleming continued: "We at InCapta are looking forward to working with both Qwote and Bahja Rodriguez on their new games. Our goal is to provide the artist with game apps that allow their fans become even closer fans to the artist."
