Covid Update

By Kitty Mayo

Lake County now has a total of 152 Covid-19 cases, and Cook County continues to add more cases at a total of 27 per the MDH website and 29 at the Cook County Covid-19 Hub.

In a conversation with Greg Ruberg, Lake View Hospital and Clinic CEO, on Tuesday, November 3rd, he stated that he expects several more cases to be added in the next 24 hours.

Ruberg says that there have been instances this week in preoperative testing that came back positive, with patients surprised because they were completely free of any symptoms of illness.

Lake County Commissioner Rick Goutermont brought up a couple of questions from the community regarding the virus at last week's board meeting, and they were addressed by Lisa Hanson, director of Lake County Health and Human Services, and Ruberg:

One individual was wondering why they received a call from the Minnesota Department of Health after being tested at an Ely facility. Hanson says that labs and health providers are required to report positive tests to MDH for the purposes of case investigation and contact tracing.

porting of infectious cases to the state, Ruberg says that it serves a valuable function for the health of everyone.

"The medical community in partnership with public health has an obligation to protect our community from communicable disease and for the greater good of the public," said Ruberg.

Another question arose regarding how positive tests are reported for Covid-19 and the flu. Some facilities do use testing equipment that can screen for multiple viruses, such as Covid-19, the flu, and RSV (a common childhood virus).

Those still without the flu vaccine are urged to get the shot.

So far Lake View is reporting having given 1,330 flu vaccines to community members, a great start compared to just 750 flu vaccinations delivered there throughout 2018.
