

Vivian N. Koppelman

I have been taking photographs as an amateur for over 45 years. My father inspired me to pursue my passion in the visual arts. After training for a while in acrylic painting, I realized that I prefer working with the camera and interacting with my subjects.

My training at the New Haven School of Photography led me into darkroom work for a professional photographer, but I realized that my interest was in capturing the moment, not producing someone else's work.

For me, photography is a personal art form, where the emotional impact of the image is as important as the subject.
