

CAR BUILDING

Teambuilding has become an important part of today's business world. It focuses on the individual's ability to work with others, to build self-esteem, confidence, trust and leadership skills to achieve common goals. These goals can range from reducing staff conflicts and stress to increasing company production. It also shows your staff that the company cares about their well being.

Team building will leave members with a positive impact on each other. They will view their co-workers differently, have a positive experience to take back to the work place and they will have the skills they learned from each other to be able to resolve problems and continue to strive in a professional and productive manner.

Your team can pave the road to success or race to the finish with this teambuilding challenge. This challenge allows teams to work together to engineer a top of the line racing machine.

While part of the team builds the car the other part will design the look of the car. Teams will be judged on creativity, engineering and group participation.

After building the car, teams are asked to present their car in a TV commercial format. This is where the team's creativity really shines.

The last part of this event has teams test their skills by racing the cars. Once the teams pass the finish line they will gather to the winners circle for prizes.
