President's Message

Dear Friends,

How wonderful it is to be a part of Coconino Community College at this special time. We have many accomplishments to celebrate and many people to honor in light of our 25th anniversary. The College is now 25 years strong because of the vision and hard work of many different people throughout our County. We are now 25 years strong because of each of you—our partners and our students.

We celebrate the fact that we are a community of learners with a strong sense of service to the community. We celebrate our students, our faculty and our staff who work hard to achieve their goals and to make a difference in the world. And we celebrate our community partners who believe in the power of education and make it possible for Coconino Community College to do great things in spite of our limited resources.

I am grateful to be a part of this College and this community. I am grateful for your support and friendship as we go forward. Thank you for helping CCC be the best we can be and for helping our students find success!

CCC President*

Foundation President's Message

I have been involved with Coconino Community College for many years in several capacities, but I am most proud of my role as a donor.

My wife and I, along with my mother and other community partners, founded the Step-Up scholarship several years ago to encourage young people who have been in the juvenile justice system to seek higher education. Today the scholarship stands as the Foundation's largest endowed scholarship. My wife and I also plan to leave a legacy gift to further endow the scholarship.

Our endowed scholarship, and the many other scholarships the Foundation manages, provides chances for a population who often have few opportunities.

What the students do with the opportunity is up to them. Some will fail, but for those who succeed, the impact is far greater than one can imagine. Not only will they be impacted, but their families, employers and entire community will be benefactors of their success.

The power of success has a ripple effect. It starts with a scholarship that provides the confidence to drive a person to achieve their goals.

I encourage you to consider starting your own scholarship or contributing to one of the many scholarships the Coconino Community College Foundation manages for the College. It is truly a wonderful feeling being the catalyst of success in our community.

*Joseph Donaldson,
CCC Foundation President*

Foundation Director's Message

Fiscal year 2015-2016 has been exciting and dynamic for the Coconino Community College Foundation.

The CCC Foundation Board honored the service of two long-time members, Chris Bavasi and Gary Smith, who have stepped off the board after serving three consecutive, three-year terms. We are very grateful for their dedication to the College and the Foundation. Recently, we welcomed several new Board Members who bring an array of skills, experience and connections within our community.

Foundation Board members are retirees, marketing specialists, bankers, accountants, government employees, educators, human resource directors, and small business owners who provide a unique mix of skills, talent and knowledge. Most importantly, Foundation Board members are advocates for the College. Together they are a powerful force contributing to the success of the CCC Foundation and in turn, the success of Coconino Community College and the students we serve.

This year, we reached an important milestone when we received the first financial statement indicating that the Foundation has generated over one million dollars in assets. This figure includes endowed scholarship funds as well as restricted and unrestricted funds.

The board should be proud and congratulate themselves for this outstanding accomplishment. Only four short years ago, the CCC Foundation managed $750,000 in combined assets.

The Annual Meeting, Alumni and Awards Breakfast is the kick-off for the Annual Fund Drive, which begins with the Annual Meeting and concludes at the end of December. We would like to sincerely thank everyone who shows support for the Foundation Board and College by attending the meeting and contributing during this important time of year.

*Scott Talboom,
Executive Director of Institutional Advancement*

Foundation Overview

The Coconino Community College Office of Institutional Advancement is an umbrella for several Coconino Community College departments, including the CCC Foundation which is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization that is a separate organization from the College.

The Coconino Community College (CCC) Foundation obtains, manages and conveys, as appropriate, private resources to assist the College in achieving its goals and to coordinate private fundraising activities. The Foundation Board of Directors reviews the CCC Strategic Plan annually and selects projects within that plan that align with the goals of the College and the Foundation. Fundraisers targeting those goals are organized to support the projects. In addition to special projects, efforts to maintain and enhance current scholarships and seek new scholarships, government grants and private foundation grants are ongoing.

The CCC Foundation, Inc. was established as a non-profit organization in 1993 organized under the laws of the State of Arizona. The Foundation's tax-exempt 501(c)(3) designation from the IRS assures donors that all charitable gifts are tax deductible. Gift support to the CCC Foundation can greatly enhance student learning.

In addition to the CCC Foundation, marketing and public relations, publications, and donor and alumni relations fall under the umbrella of the Office of Institutional Advancement.

Scholarship recipient finds calling in critical care

Chelsea Brumbaugh's idea to become a nurse took form at 13 years old.

Chelsea's mother went into a diabetic coma, and she studied how the nurses cared for her mother, and comforted Chelsea and her sister Ciara.

"After that, I knew I wanted to be a nurse," Chelsea said.

Her dream came true in 2013, after she graduated from Coconino Community College with an associate's degree in nursing. She passed her state certification exams and was accepted to work for Northern Arizona Healthcare at Flagstaff Medical Center. She then went through the NAH Critical Care Training Program.

"I'm doing open hearts right now," Chelsea said, adding that she works in the Cardiovascular Intensive Care Unit, or CVICU for short. "It's cool how we actually know what the heart's going to do after open-heart surgery."

PATH BEGINS

By the time Chelsea was in high school, she had begun working toward her goal. She enrolled as a student in Coconino Association for Vocations, Industry and Technology and began taking college courses at CCC to receive a certificate as a Certified Nursing Assistant, which she did before she even graduated from high school.

She immediately went to work in a doctor's office in Flagstaff for practical experience, and began attending CCC for her associate's degree in nursing. At CCC, Chelsea received several scholarships to aid her in her studies. Among the scholarships she received were the Raymond Educational Foundation Scholarship, the Hartzell High School Scholarship and the Jason Kurtz Nursing Scholarship.

"I got a lot of my prerequisites done before nursing school even started," Chelsea said, adding that she was able to get a variety of clinical experiences in the community while at CCC.

Northern Arizona Healthcare RN Chelsea Brumbaugh stands with cardiac equipment in a critical care unit at Flagstaff Medical Center.

"It was there I knew I wanted to do ICU of some sort," Chelsea said. "It was a great experience."

Her goal was to become a nurse with a two-year degree and work while she went back to school to get a bachelor's of science in Nursing – a process she recommends to others for the cost savings and because it allowed her to get to work a lot earlier than students working on four-year degrees. She received her bachelor's degree in 2016 while being a nurse at FMC over the past three years.

ALL IN A DAY

Chelsea said that she works 12-hour shifts, from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., or 7 p.m. to 7 a.m.

The first couple of hours for an open-heart patient after the surgeon closes up the chest and the patient is brought to the CVICU are the most critical.

"A lot can go wrong," Chelsea said. "There are just so many things going on. You're watching a whole bunch of stuff at once."

CVICU nurses, who work on a one-nurse-to-one-patient ratio, watch patient IV "drips," keep a close eye on blood-pressure and heart-rate monitors and make sure that vital signs stay within a certain range. The nurses are constantly checking on patients for signs of difficulty or distress. The process is intimidating at first, and some patients thrive after surgery while others require deeper care.

"It's very stressful, but I enjoy it," Chelsea said. "It's so much fun seeing these patients walking the halls the next day, thanking you."

Chelsea's mother, who made it through the diabetic coma episode, works at Flagstaff Medical Center as well. Chelsea added that her sister, Ciara, also works at FMC as a nurse, and she is currently still in the training program.

Ciara graduated from CCC three years after her sister. While at CCC, Ciara also received scholarships to help her reach her goal. Among the scholarships Ciara received were the Raymond Educational Foundation Scholarship and the Blue Cross Blue Shield of Arizona Nursing Scholarship.

Chelsea said she and her sister have worked together before.

"We were waitresses before this," she said and smiled.

CCC installs new kiln with help of Foundation

Don Fethkenher, an art instructor at Coconino Community College had his marching orders.

Dr. Dudley Gardner, Vice President of Academic Affairs, asked Fethkenher to examine the art department's equipment, the quality of the equipment and if anything was in need of replacement.

After further examination, Fethkenher came to a realization that the kiln was too old, lacked the necessary safety equipment and needed replacing for bigger and better projects.

Over the last 20 years, the bricks in the kiln started to lose insulation quality, which made the heating process uneven. The door on the kiln was also leaking heat and the kiln was not equipped with the necessary safety features — in case the campus was ever to experience fire or a power surge.

Thanks to a donation from the CCC Foundation from Palette to Palate proceeds and money from Coconino Community College and the CCC Clay Club, the art department was able to purchase a brand new kiln. The Foundation was able to contribute $7,000 to the new kiln, which was about one third of the $22,000 cost.

"It's a rewarding experience being able to watch the Palette to Palate event grow from year to year, so we are always happy to help out the art department with special projects and equipment to make our students' experience here at the College an exceptional one," said Scott Tallboom, Executive Director of Institutional Advancement.

The new kiln is 20 cubic feet, and can reach heat up to 2,340 degrees Fahrenheit. The new kiln gives art students the opportunity to sculpt and create taller and bigger projects than the previous kiln would allow.

Fethkenher said the kiln was installed during the summer months, and it is still waiting for a hood so that the students can start using the kiln for class projects. All art students eagerly await the delivery of the hood.

New book documents CCC's 25-year history

The vision of a small group and the tireless work of legions of people helped make the idea of a community college in Coconino County a reality.

County residents voted to form a community college district in November of 1990, and in May of 1991, voters approved setting aside some of their property taxes to fund the brand new college. The first students began taking classes in August of 1991.

Now, 25 years later, Coconino Community College continues to provide workforce and university-track education to residents of the 18,600-square-mile, rural county we call home. The job hasn't been easy, but optimism, hard work and the ability to overcome the odds has given this community college its story.

It is the story of "Your College, Your Future," and it has been documented in a brief history book. The book is by no means complete. It is meant to serve as a living document that will continue to grow in detail and scope as the years come and go. It is with hope that this small book receives help with the growth from the employees, students and alumni of CCC as well as residents of Coconino County.

Employees at Coconino Community College worked together to create a book on CCC's 25-year history, called "The Story of Coconino Community College."

Trauma HAL makes debut at CCC thanks to donor generosity

He can blink his eyes. He can talk, and he can bleed. You can give him shots, ask him questions and you can find out what ails him just like any human.

Except he's not human.

Meet Trauma Hal, the newest state-of-the-art addition to the Coconino Community College team in the Career and Technical Education department for the Nursing, Fire Science, EMT and Allied Health programs.

"Essentially, Hal replaces a live victim," said David Manning, CCC's Fire Science and Emergency Medical Service Program Coordinator and Instructor. "He lets us interchange a variety of injuries that are impossible to simulate on a live victim."

Trauma Hal, a simulator mannequin, has lungs, organs, ribs and plumbing, Manning said. He comes with a variety of "wound packages" for the students to learn from as well. Among them are broken bones, sores, burns and even amputations. Additionally, he is full of computer technology that allows for wireless diagnostics and interaction between students and patient through a proctor-assisted process.

Lori Edwards, CCC Director of Nursing and Allied Health, said, "Nursing students will utilize Trauma Hal to enhance their learning experience. Trauma Hal provides a more real-life experience prior to actually working with a person. The student will be able to practice using multiple scenarios to become sharper in their skill set."

David Manning, CCC's Fire Science and Emergency Medical Service Program Coordinator, left, and Lori Edwards, CCC's Director of Nursing and Allied Health, check on Trauma Hal at the Fourth Street Campus.

Edwards added that Trauma Hal will be important for students to make patient assessments — listen for lung sounds like wheezing, breath sounds, cardiac anomalies, vital signs and more. Additionally, Trauma Hal can be used for dressing and treating wounds as well as for learning to apply electro-cardiogram monitors and running full cardiac-arrest scenarios.

Trauma Hal made his official debut Monday, April 11, 2016, at the Fourth Street Campus. Manning said Trauma Hal is ready and now at work. His first job was to serve for the EMS certification testing in May. Seventy-two students ran through the testing process with Trauma Hal over a two-day period.

Ideally, Manning said that Trauma Hal will be joined by another adult and one infant (pediatric) model of the mannequin to augment different interactions EMTs and nurses have with patients in the real world. Manning added that Trauma Hal's longevity is expected to be more than a decade for the college and is able to be upgraded.

The purchase of Trauma Hal was more than $70,000. The purchase was made possible with funding support from the Perkins Grant and the Arizona

CCC employees give from heart, wallet

Fundraising is a never-ending process, with funds coming from many sources. However, one source that is near and dear to the heart, are the funds raised from employees at Coconino Community College for the CCC Foundation. Nearly 50 percent of the full-time employees at the College give either through payroll deduction or a one-time gift.

“Our employees are incredible. When I speak to other community college directors and tell them about our employee giving success they look at me in disbelief.” Said Scott Talboom, Executive Director of Institutional Advancement at CCC.

CCC employee Jennifer Strones said, “I give because like many of our students, I was a low-income, first-generation student and I received an Upward Bound scholarship to go to ASU, and CCC employees enjoy a meal and student success stories at Employee Giving Day.

I remember what it meant to me. I just want to pay that forward to someone else.”

In addition to money, CCC employees also volunteer hundreds of hours to the Foundation to assist with events like the Annual Meeting, Alumni and Awards breakfast and Palette to Palate.

Alumni and Donor Relations coordinator Rachel Edelstein said, “Seeing the impact that scholarships have on students is rewarding for faculty and staff when they realize that they have played a part in their success.”

Collectively, Coconino

Community College employees and retirees are a significant factor in the Annual Fund Drive, and their financial commitment is just another way they demonstrate how much they care about the students we serve.

Palette to Palate 2016 best yet

The 14th Annual Coconino Community College Palette to Palate 2016 fundraising event raised more than $15,000 for arts scholarships and arts-related projects.

Palette to Palate is an annual event hosted by the CCC Foundation in support of the Fine Arts Department and its students at CCC. Local artists, restaurateurs, patrons of the arts, community partners and attendees all contribute to raising essential funds that assist CCC Fine Arts students with scholarships, equipment and travel.

“Palette to Palate is a great event for the Flagstaff Community partly because Flagstaff is such an artistic community,” said Scott Talboom, CCC Director of Institutional Advancement. “CCC has been involved with the arts since the very beginning. In fact, many of our local artists have started their career by attending classes here at CCC.”

Two Coconino Community College students, Michael McCabe and Hannah Valdovino, were selected to receive $1,500 Palette to Palate Visual Arts scholarships.

The amount raised exceeded expectations.

“This was our best year yet,” Talboom said. “It just keeps getting better and better each year.”

Flagstaff-based artist Shonto Begay describes his donated piece to the Palette to Palate audience. His piece, along with others, helped to raise more than $15,000 to help fund arts scholarships and programs at CCC.

Big check, big dreams

CCC student Ciara Scott received scholarship assistance from the Raymond Educational Foundation to help complete her studies.

The word “education” comes up often in Ciara Scott’s family. Her grandmothers, mother and aunts were all teachers.

When she graduated from Tuba City High School in 2014, Scott set her sights on college, and with the help of the Raymond Educational Foundation, she will be able to do so without having to worry about finances.

Scott was a recipient of one of the Raymond Educational Foundation scholarships to attend Coconino Community College. She made a presentation filled with “thank you’s” on June 6, 2016, at the Elks Lodge during the Raymond Educational Foundation’s annual meeting.

“I feel super grateful that I was one of the students awarded among many because I know how competitive scholarships can be and also how the costs of attending college are always on the rise,” Scott said, adding that she plans to use the funds to pay for tuition, fees and books at CCC.

CCC President Colleen Smith told the crowd of about 50 people that what the Raymond Educational Foundation does is far-reaching. CCC’s students have stories that are varied. Some are young, some older, some come straight out of high school and some are returning to school.

“What you do reaches much farther than you could possibly know,” Dr. Smith told the crowd. “Thank you for what you do for our students.”

In her letter of interest when applying for scholarships, Scott stated, “I didn’t think it was possible for me to ever become successful. All my life I was always told what to do and to stay in school. I knew that a college education would be important, but over and over, I was indecisive about what I wanted to study.”

Scott enrolled at CCC with the help of her older sister Loreal, who graduated from Northern Arizona University with a master’s degree in School Counseling. Scott’s initial interest was in Early Childhood Education, but that interest evolved into health-related topics, which are topics of concern in the Tuba City community from where she hails.

Because she earned several college credits while still in high school, Scott is slated to graduate from CCC with an associate’s degree in General Studies in December 2016 and head to university after the holiday break.

“I would have to say that CCC was a major support to me through everything,” Scott said, adding that she was offered a federal work-study position that helped with her transition to Flagstaff and the higher-education setting. She’s also completed internships and volunteer positions in the healthcare field.

“I like how inclusive CCC is,” Scott said. “Everyone’s just always willing to help each other out.”

Scott’s plans are to study Health Sciences with an emphasis on public health in order to go into a health-related career. She is a CCC2NAU student and will be attending NAU in the spring to study Public Health.

“The idea to go back home and help my native people with the degree I pursue is a goal of mine,” Scott said.

She added, “I hope my legacy will inspire others to never give up.”

IDA helps student triumph over family setback

Coconino County Community Services and CCC are in the second year of a partnership that helps students pay for college through an Individual Development Account or IDA.

The program, geared toward post-secondary education, called $ave2Learn, is open to lower-income/lower-asset greater Flagstaff community members attending CCC or in high school preparing to attend CCC.

One current $ave2Learn participant, C.J. Slack, came to the program after attending CCC for two years while in his high school's (CAVIAT) program. During this period he earned 51 college credits with a 3.67 GPA at CCC. He consistently earned a place on the Vice President's academic achievement list.

While C.J. was in high school his mother had multiple brain aneurysms rupture and his father had a small stroke. Between both parent's medical bills and his father losing his business, this student knew that he would need to work his way through school. When he applied for the $ave2Learn program, he was just graduating from high school and was working at a department store in Flagstaff.

C.J. Slack graduated from high school in June 2015. He saved through the fall 2016 semester and received his first match through Alliance Bank to fund his post-secondary education at CCC during the spring 2016 semester. His educational goals include completing his Associate of Arts degree in business, and beginning his pre-medical school studies at CCC.

CCC student C.J. Slack credits the $ave2Learn program for helping him along the path to achieving his educational goal of becoming a physician.

"My journey would not have been possible without $ave2Learn, CAVIAT and Dual Enrollment," Slack said. "I really couldn't have done it without these programs, so I really appreciate what they have done for me."

Currently, 13 students have received federal and local matching funds (including the Dougherty Foundation, Forest Highlands Foundation and Arizona Community Foundation of Flagstaff) to help with tuition in 2015-2016. Approximately $7,000 in student savings has been matched by $10,000 in local foundation support and $10,000 in federal funds.

in Coconino County, Dr. Raymond was known for generously helping with educational costs, providing free medical care and promoting health in the community. This two-year scholarship offers students $1,650 per year, totaling $3,300.

After Dr. Raymond's death, the Flagstaff Education Foundation became the Raymond Educational Foundation in his honor. Since 1963, the Raymond Educational Foundation has given more than $4 million to organizations such as Northern Arizona University, Flagstaff Unified School District, Flagstaff Family Food Center, National Hospice and Coconino Community College.

Mark McCullough of the Raymond Educational Foundation, CCC District Governing Board Chair Patricia Garcia, Ciara Scott and CCC President Colleen A. Smith receive a check from the Raymond Educational Foundation to the CCC Foundation.
