Finnian's Pet Tips

Hi! I'm Finnian Smith, top dog at TenderTouch CanineCare and a source of inspiration, and amusement, for my mom and dad. My owners are diligent about keeping me happy and healthy, and I'd like to share some of my secrets.

Today's topic: Boarding Your Pet

Hi everyone! I wanted to tell you about my recent experience being boarded. Even if your pets use a great pet sitter (like my mom and dad) during a busy work day, sometimes a dog is better off boarded while you are away. Well, that's me! You see, I am a "reactive" dog. Looking at my handsome face it is hard to believe but...well...I am fearful of my own species! So when mom and dad went out of town recently to the annual Pet Sitters International conference I went to camp. Here's how it went:

Here's the low-down on my "boarding" experience:

 I am fortunate; I got to live at Miss Lori's house! Lori is a trainer of reactive dogs and she understands me so well. I hung out in a large pen in the lower level (not in a crate), and throughout the day I had the yard to myself. Yes! I so enjoyed the fresh air and sunshine, and I got lots of attention. And for me, being boarded doesn't bother my appetite at all.

 Many dogs, cats too, can become stressed out when away from home, and bark/meow and not eat well. Make sure that your mom and dad visit the facility where you will be boarded, ask lots of questions about accommodations, and make sure that you will be on your same feeding schedule and receive any necessary medications. Pack your favorite toys and a blanket/bed. Ask about checking in on your progress; perhaps there is a nice facility that has video so mom and dad can see for themselves that you are a-okay. My mom texted Miss Lori a couple of times to check on me.

 I have to say, though, when mom and dad came to take me home I barked like a maniac, I was so happy to see them! No offense to Lori of course, she's awesome, but there really is no place like home!

Thanks for reading my blog! I hope these tips help keep your pet healthy and happy. And until next time, remember: for the best in Professional Pet Sitting, call my owners at TenderTouch CanineCare. Your pet will thank you!

Hi! I'm Maureen Smith and I started TenderTouch CanineCare in 2003, when I needed a change from the traditional workplace. Having a knowledge about pet sitting (our puppy had a great sitter!), and a passion for pets, I decided to put my energy to good use. Many wonderful pets and their owners are glad that I did!
