ABBA—Norway's Nazi Secret

Anni-Frid Lyngstad popular known as Frida Lyngstad, was one of the four members of the Swedish group ABBA. Frida Lyngstad was born on November 15, 1945, in Bjørkåsen, a little hamlet in Ballangen, northern Norway, to a young Norwegian girl and a German soldier, Alfred Haase just after the end of the Second World War and the German occupation of Norway.

Just like Frida, there were as many as 14,000 children borne out of liaisons between Nazi soldiers and Norwegian women. Offspring were produced by RSS chief Heinrich Himmler's Lebensborn ('fountain of life') plan to produce a race of blond-haired Aryans. Special homes were established throughout Germany and its occupied places in Europe, including Norway; where SS officers had intercourse with selected women. Frida was the product of one such affair.

.In 1943, three years after Germany attacked Norway, a 24 year old Nazi sergeant Alfred Haase who was posted to Ballangen was taken by the sight of the beautiful 18 year old Synni Lyngstad. Ballangen is a little town, 20 miles from the Narvik Port, where the SS had set up the Lebensborn stud home was built. Haase wooed Lyngstad with a sack of potatoes that was scarce in wartime Norway. One thing led to the other, and the two became intimate and had a physical relationship.

Synni was subject to ridicule and insults for having slept with a German man. Enough of taunts and ridicule, Synni and her widoed mother Agny (Arntine Lyngstad) left Norway to come to Sweden. Agny left first and Synni followed her mother two years later. Though Synni took the job of a waitress to take care of her family, she didn't live long. She died of kidney failure at a young age of 21, when Frida was just 2 years old.
