

The Stickman No. 10 Puzzle Box

(Autumn Box)

The Stickman No. 10 Puzzlebox is also called the “Autumn Box” due to its application of Fall colors. This was Robert’s first experience with using padauk, and he did not realize that he would also be arrayed in decorative Autumn colors, as this wood’s sawdust tends to permanently dye almost anything it lands on its own unique shade of orange. The thin layer of dust it left all over the wood shop was quite bizarre to behold.

The decorative dovetail locking bars of this box can freely slide in either direction, but not totally off. The logical assumption would be that freeing one end or the other would somehow allow something else to happen, but it doesn’t.

Opening this puzzle requires the discovery of a very elusive trick. Once discovered, its two secret chambers become easy to access after only 15 moves. Locking both sides back up again requires implementing this trick half way.
