About Mountain Child Advocacy Center

Buncombe County has over 4,000 reported cases of child abuse and neglect each year. Mountain Child Advocacy Center (MCAC) is a safe, welcoming place where children who have been victims of abuse and neglect can begin their journey of healing.

Mountain Child Advocacy Center is a nationally accredited Child Advocacy Center, implementing evidence-based best practice procedures. The purpose of this model is to bring the "system" to the child and help critical agencies work in a collaborative approach that results in effective, efficient, and child-centered casework.

Mountain Child Advocacy Center's mission is to identify and respond to child abuse and neglect in Buncombe County by educating, advocating, and empowering the public to protect children and to reduce trauma for those children who have experienced abuse through a coordinated community effort.
