Sunday Meditation

Many years ago I surrendered my heart to Christ deeply, completely, unquestionably. Even then I knew that, without God's supernatural aid, I wouldn't be able to live up to my commitment, but would inevitably fall into sin, would entertain unclean and uncharitable thoughts and commit unholy actions. God seemed to say to me: "I have heard your deep Yes to My Will. None of your subsequent failures will invalidate that yes." I was comforted to realize that the deepest part of me, my heart, had surrendered itself completely. I belong to Christ radically, irreversibly, forever. The part of me that sins is the weakest and the most superficial part of my soul. That isn't the real me, the deepest me, but sin that dwells in my frail flesh (Romans 7:17-18). Never in all those years, though my flesh has failed me often, has my heart doubted the reality of its first consecration. All for Jesus, Richard
