"The Parish Council was divided in its opinion.

There was a view that the appearance and proportions of this vernacular cottage is fairly unique in the village and within the conservation area, and it would be detrimental to lose this example.

However, there was also a view that the village already contained a large selection of diverse developments, a number of which had been created by extending or amalgamating existing properties and it was felt that there should be a presumption on the Council to allow appropriate modernisation and expansion to cater for modern living requirements. In this case, the proposed extension had been designed in a sympathetic manner."
