

Ron Ruhman Biography

Ron is a professional comedian who headlines clubs, colleges, corporate, and Church events throughout the United States and Canada.

Ron has opened for many musicians and comedians including Shawn Wayans, Leon Redbone, and Judy Tenuta, done audience warm-up on several productions including Castle Rock Pictures "Forget Paris" starring Billy Crystal, and appeared on numerous television shows including "Americas Funniest People" and Boston Legal.

In 2006, Ron traveled to New Orleans where he worked alongside the Katrina victims and relief workers during the day and entertained at night.

Ron has been called a high energy Seinfeld as he brings a very energetic style to the stage while sharing his interesting slant on day-to-day life in an act that is clean, smart, and very entertaining.

Whether he is headlining national clubs, entertaining at corporate events for Fortune 500 companies, working the room at a private party, or out in the field working with relief workers, Ron continues to impress with his professional ability to adapt to any situation and spread laughter wherever he goes.

Currently Ron is the director of SCIT, a professional improv troupe that headlines and conducts workshops at clubs, colleges, and corporate and Church events, throughout the United States. SCIT was recently featured in Time Magazine where columnist Joel Stein referred to them as; "Impressively funny".

Ron is a highly sought-after improv teacher. He has developed a successful curriculum utilized to teach workshops where improv games are used to help improve participant's confidence and ability to be successful in speaking situations. Ron has been conducting weekly workshops in Orange County for ten years. To find out more about SCIT, visit <http://CornerstoneComedy.com/Pages/SCIT.htm>.
