

Holocaust and Judaica

CATALOGUE THIRTY-FIVE

Fall/Winter 2010

In 1939, the luxury liner St. Louis sailed from Hamburg. Aboard were 936 Jewish refugees, they were never allowed to enter Cuba or the U.S. They were finally admitted into Holland, Belgium and England. As the rest of the world looked on with apathy, they were deported to concentration camps, where most of them perished.

Each Stolpersteine (Stumbling Block), pictured below, states the name of the deceased, their date of birth, date of deportation, name of concentration camp, and date of murder. Ermordet-Murder.

For Marie & Siegfried Perl, my grandparents. These Stolpersteine (Stumbling Block) are in the sidewalk on a beautiful tree-lined street in front of their former home in Berlin as a memorial to them. They were murdered in Theresienstadt and Auschwitz. There is no grave for them.

The Stolpersteine for my grandmother, Selma Heimann/Heymann. Another lovely tree-lined street, Helmstedter Strasse, where she lived in Berlin. She was deported and murdered in Raasiku.

PLEASE CONTACT ME IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN KNOWING MORE ABOUT THIS POWERFUL MEMORIAL TO THE MURDERED JEWS OF EUROPE

1. 1995 Award Dinner Honoring Dr. Sue Bailey and Alex J. Mandl Commorative Folio Numbered 501 to 600. Number 68 of this limited edition produced for donor recognition by the Jewish Theological Seminary- from the rare book collection, beautiful colored loose plates, in Hardcover with ties, VG $85.
2. Abzug, Robert, H. GIs Remember. Liberating the concentration camps, the reaction of the soldiers who first entered the camps, was shock, disbelief, anger and horror. Describes the reactions of the Jewish soldiers- it was worse than anything they had ever seen. "It was indescribable." Many lived the rest of their lives haunted by what they saw. Illustrated, paperwrappers, 4to (large format) 77 pages, profusely illustrated, National Museum of American Jewish Military History, 1994, VG $24.

8. And I Still See Their Faces: Images of Polish Jews. The book is based on an exhibition. Many of the photographs in this book were donated by non-jews currently living in Poland, and jews of Polish origin from all over the world. Jewish life in Poland from the end of the last century to the Holocaust, with all its intimacies, dignity, pride and then horror, is arrayed in an exhibit of faded photographs culled from family albums, shoe boxes, and attics. At home and abroad, the photos depict assimilated, observant, modern and traditional jews, rich and poor, all creating an exuberant and forceful world now lost. Some sent in photos in the hope that a face would be recognized and that perhaps a friend had survived the roundups, the executions, the death camps. A unique photo collection of great documental, historical and artistic value. The pictures published for the first time are accompanied by fragments of authentic letters or conversations showing their origin. One photograph was carried by a daughter of her mother through two selections by Dr. Mengele at Auschwitz, once she held it in her mouth, the second time she taped it with a band-aid to the bottom of her foot, she was 14 years old at the time. She later found out that her parents, sister and brother were shot to death attempting to avoid deportation to Auschwitz. Also includes never before seen photos of the Lodz Ghetto and round ups for deportation. The book is magnificent, unique, moving, and most important. Shalom Foundation, Warsaw. 1996. folio, text in Polish and English, 1st. ed, profuse illus, with photos and text, 230p. F in F dj $250.

GUNTER DEMNIG

WINNER OF THE OBERMAYER HISTORY AWARD

Gunter Demnig first catches your eye, then your thoughts. Although the Cologne artist's stolpersteine (stumbling blocks) are neatly paved into the sidewalk, they force passers-by to stop and read them. "Here lived" begins the inscriptions engraved in brass on the concrete squares measuring about four inches—on each one, just the name, date, and place of death of an individual killed by the Nazis. But this basic information about the fate of one person among 6 million has the power to create questions in the minds of pedestrians.

"The stumbling blocks become reminders and voices; they call out. Demnig has placed stumbling blocks in about 60 cities, towns, and villages throughout Germany; there are more than 4,500 so far. What he began in 1993 is becoming the largest monument to the victims of National Socialism; it is a constantly expanding mosaic. "It is for all the victims," says Demnig, "Jews, gypsies, homosexuals, and resistance fighters."

The monument is being built with the help of numerous local initiatives. Not only do relatives and descendants of victims contact Demnig; schools, associations, and other groups apply for official permission to add blocks, as well. At Max-Planck Elementary School in Berlin, a class started one of many projects inspired by Demnig. To prepare for the installation of the stumbling blocks, students researched archives, talked with historians, and interviewed survivors and their families to learn about that time.

Sometimes, however, Demnig's idea provokes opposition. Cities such as Munich and Leipzig don't allow the stones, and there are homeowners who try to avoid them in front of their doors. But that can't stop the project. "It has become an avalanche: Every day we have requests for stumbling blocks", says Uta Franke, Demnig's partner who has meanwhile taken over the project's organization and documentation. "In many cities, towns and even villages, just the idea to set a stone starts a new wave of discussion and research about the Nazi past."

FALLEN LEAVES
by Menashe Kadishman
BERLIN JEWISH MUSEUM

A powerful exhibition of over 10,000 open mouthed coarsly cut iron plates in the ground. His display of the murdered Jews of Europe. One of the most moving displays that I have seen. It took me a while to recover from this painful recollection of the horror of the Holocaust. We must never forget.
