EKG TECHNICIAN PROGRAM

EKG Technicians, an abbreviation for electrocardiograph technicians--are responsible for performing electrocardiograms or electrocardiographs. These tests measure the heart's electrical activity. EKG Technicians conduct tests of the cardiovascular system. They record the pumping and circulation of blood by the heart and blood vessels with an EKG machine.

When a patient comes in complaining of chest pains or simply needs a routine physical examination, the EKG Tech attaches electrodes from an EKG machine to the patient's chest, arms and legs, then adjusts the machine's settings to obtain a reading. The machine prints out an electrocardiograph, and the EKG tech hands it over to the cardiologist for interpretation. Electrocardiographs are used to diagnose a range of heart diseases that includes angina, coronary heart disease, and atherosclerosis.

The Average EKG Technician Salary is $52,160 per year, according to U.S. Department of Labor Bureau of Labor Statistics in May 2011. This monetary figure has the potential to increase over the next few years depending on the demand for EKG Techs. Some hospitals are cross training certified nursing assistants to perform EKGs, however they are not certified EKG Technicians and often experience a disadvantage negotiating income earning potential.

PRESTIGE NURSE AIDE TRAINING ACADEMY offers a 10 week Program designed to prepare students with the knowledge to perform 12 lead EKGs, analyze basic cardiac rhythms, and thorough knowledge of the cardiovascular system.

Upon completion of the program students will sit for the National Certification Exam.
