

I have written a young adult novel with a historical background of the Catholic faith in Japan and am trying to identify publishers who might be interested.

Q: I have written a young adult novel with a historical background of the Catholic faith in Japan and am trying to identify publishers who might be interested. I have sold my work to publications such as Woman's World, St. Anthony Messenger Magazine, and Our Family Magazine. What would you suggest?

It sounds as though the religious market would be a good place to look for a home for your book. My suggestion would be to talk with editors you've dealt with at the magazines and find out if they can recommend book editors or publishers who might be a good fit for your story. Some might even be part of a larger company with a book division. 5-6:02