

still more reasons to use dan.

Your dependent clauses have declared independence from their modifiers.

(It's always something.)

Your concept is so stupendous, there are no words.

(Don't worry. We'll find some.)

When you told staffing you needed some writers, they sent you a bunch of pens.

(To be fair, pens do write. They just need someone to operate them.)

You gave a monkey a computer and it did not eventually write Shakespeare.

(Monkeys. What are you going to do.)

You get direct, personal, immediate access to an award-winning ad agency writer.

(Kind of like having a Bat phone for your writing needs.)
