

Robert L Crosby, DMD, PC

Cosmetic and Implant Dentistry

If the idea of going to the dentist for a procedure brings on feelings of fear or anxiety, there are options to ease this anxiety. Oral conscious sedation is as easy as taking an aspirin and you will feel relaxed and at ease. Oral conscious sedation does not “knock you out” like some other forms of anesthesia. You will remain awake during your procedure, but you will be in a heightened state of relaxation. It is also possible that you will not remember part, or all, of your procedure.

Oral conscious sedation is extremely safe and easy. It is much less expensive than other forms of sedation, and you will be able to talk and breathe on your own during the procedure. It also makes long or complex procedures seem shorter, allowing you to have all of your work done in a single visit. As an added precaution, a local anesthetic will be given to the area that is being worked on to ensure that there is no pain. You will need to have someone drive you to and from the office, if you use oral conscious sedation. This is for your safety.

Don't wait any longer to have necessary dental work performed because you are nervous. Ask our staff about oral conscious sedation to see if it is right for you.