Bandidos Restaurant has become a West Asheville destination for locals and the like. I moved to Asheville in 2009 with experience in all types of cuisine starting as a short order cook at 13 years old. I moved around the country, working for various types of restaurants and country clubs. I have acquired a wide array of cultural culinary knowledge, from fine dining to local pizza shops. I fell in love with Latin food while I was living in Florida. I met some great people from Mexico and all over Central and South America as well as the Caribbean, who introduced me to their traditional dishes. I wanted to incorporate these ideas and cultures into many workplaces but to no avail. When I moved to Asheville I saw a different world, one in which these ideas could flourish. I started out with a street cart selling scratch-made tamales and burritos & the rest is history. I made a decision to source as much local product as possible. It wasn't easy; the prices were high and the availability slim. Over time, I have met the right people and the right farmers to make this dream possible and affordable. We will never skimp on quality for quantity. Our mission is to support local farmers and offer the people fresh, quality, non-processed food that is delicious, unique and affordable. We hope you enjoy your experience.

Thank you sincerely,
Justin Smudde & Bandidos Staff

We at Bandidos believe we DO NOT have to support Big Corporations in order to succeed.
All of our products are sourced through local businesses within North Carolina.
