BROAD SCRUTINY OF KAVANAUGH? I DOUBT IT!

By Steve Bakke  July 15, 2018

Here's what provoked me:

We're finally here folks. The cards are on the table and all the chips have been played by the Democrats. The world is coming to an end and all because a sincere fellow named Brett Kavanaugh just might come down on the side of preserving human life, in all its forms.

Here's my response:

Broad Scrutiny of Kavanaugh? I Doubt It!

Whatever means the Democrats use to demonstrate broad and objective scrutiny of Supreme Court nominee Brett Kavanaugh, don't be fooled. They'll bemoan the Judge's theories on Presidential power. Gun control will be described as coming to an end. They'll predict millions of deaths from a changing healthcare system. And there'll be predictions of our Constitution's demise.

I won't waste my breath arguing against those points because they won't be important considerations for Democrats. The only real litmus test will be abortion rights and Roe v. Wade. All the rest are just camouflage to serve as false credentials for fairness and objectivity. If the concern about abortion rights were to magically disappear, confirmation by the Senate would be a cakewalk.

Senator Schumer added weight to my opinion when he stated: "The onus is on the nominee to show where he or she might stand" on Roe v. Wade. He's holding out for an "affirmative statement of support" for Roe. It's too bad Democrats will be wasting the country's time and energy.

But what I find most distressing is that a nominee demonstrating interest in preservation of human life would be considered unfit by about half of our elected representatives. That's sad.
