

FILEY : Close up of the boulder clay showing the impact of sub-aerial processes. Rainwater has formed a gully in the soft, unconsolidated clay and an alluvial fan of debris has been deposited on the beach. High tides and waves wash this fine material away leaving a beach composed of the boulders eroded from the boulder clay.

