There is only one original executed surety bond located at the secure repository identified as the Electronic Surety Provider.

Copies of the digital data elements, or imaged bond forms, will be stored in multiple locations, and regardless of how many copies there is only one original executed surety bond.

These forms are provided as a free sample format and users should consult their legal counsel prior to use. No legal representation is provided with these forms

Bond Type

There are multiple bond forms that cover a range of coverages.

This data field is used to identify the specific bond obligation the surety is covering by identifying the Bond Form by name.

Only bond forms that utilize the XBRL taxonomy for data interoperability can be exchanged electronically.

Surety Bond Form and Version Number

The data fields of the bond form are listed to capture the variable bond specific data elements, and by reference are incorporated into the body and text of the Bond Form which define the obligations under the bond.

Bond form text is subject to change, and by incorporating the Surety Bond Form and Version Number all stakeholders will know what bond form text applies to the bonded obligation.

This allows the key data elements to be administered and exchanged in XBRL without the need to exchange the entire text of the bond form.

Principal

The Principal is the specific entity that is required to post the surety bond as a financial guaranty on a specific contract to cover the obligations of that entity.

The Principal is the entity “principally responsible” to carry out the obligation that is covered by the bond.

The Principal is the named party to the contract that requires the bond.

The surety bond backs the Principal on a contract, and by extension assumes the obligations of the contract as it pertains to the Principal only in the case of a default.

A surety bond never stands alone, but requires an underlying contract.

The Surety is not a named party to the contract that requires the bond.

Surety NAIC Code

To enable greater efficiency in the digital administration of the surety bond, and to enable reliable data interoperability, the surety company is identified by their unique and specific National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC) number assigned to the insurance company and/or group.

National Association of Insurance Commissioners Website

Surety companies must be registered on the US Department of the Treasury's Listing of Approved Sureties (Department Circular 570) referred to as the T-List. The T-List utilizes the NAIC number to identify surety companies.

By using the NAIC number instead of the multiple names of insurance companies the accuracy for identifying the surety company is improved, digitally administering the surety information is enabled, as is the ability to monitor and manage surety companies as part of a portfolio management.

Bond Number

The data elements contained in the XBRL-CET bond forms are consistent regardless of what system provider is used.

The consistent use of standardized data elements enables accuracy for identifying the specific surety bond and digitally administering the surety information, as is the ability to monitor and manage surety bonds as part of a portfolio management.
