Bad journalism

Headline: Excitement as trial shows drug could slow progress of disease! Hailed as 'enormously significant', results in groundbreaking trial are first time a drug has been shown to suppress effects of this disease. This is fake news. Mocking sick people. This article gives false hope. It is an ad for a pharmaceutical entity.

Headline is misleading! It really means this drug may be available in 15 20 years. If it becomes available it is too late for current sufferers. If it becomes available it will be too expensive for sufferers. This product eases the discomfort. It is not a cure.

It will have many side effects for which you get other drugs. This is the pharmaceutical marketing model: create demand, create repeat's, don't cure.

This article is bad journalism. This journalist is used as sales person to create demand for this pharmaceutical.

This type of journalism ends. This type of media ends.
