

Healthworks Safety AED Lease Program

The new American Heart Association statistics show that over 359,000 people die of cardiac arrest each year and unfortunately the overall survival rate is only 9.5%.

Doing CPR and using an AED in those first critical minutes can dramatically change those statistics. Seattle's survival rate is over 62% because of extensive CPR training and AED deployment.

Leasing is a great opportunity to provide an AED for your location, eliminating your budget constraints with a low monthly payment.

Philips HeartStart Onsite AED

The HeartStart OnSite AED is designed for lay responders, is less expensive than other models and is designed for location in churches, buildings, banks, gyms and similar facilities. Clear voice prompts calmly coach the responder through the emergency, and sensors in the pads react to what the rescuer is doing to guide them.

It also coaches how to do CPR and compressions. Separate pediatric pads reduce the energy level for safe use on children less than eight years of age. It can be used outdoors, but not recommended for storage in high dust or moisture areas.
