Congratulations

Nikesha N. Moore, EdD/OrgL

Dr. Nikesha N. Moore is a proud Doctorate of Education in Leadership and Learning with a specialization in Organizational Leadership graduate. Her three aspirations at the beginning of the accelerated three and nine-month program were to host her first gospel concert, graduate with honors, and save lives.

Dr. Moore had a full house for her first gospel concert, she graduated from Aspen University, and the university recognized her with the National Society of Learning and Success award (NSLS). In the United States, 8% of students nationally receive this honor.

Dr. Moore graduated summa cum laude with a 3.98 GPA going straight through the program where most courses were eight weeks, except four dissertation courses.

This degree has allowed five participants from three regions in the United States and Africa not to have their voices silenced about workplace incivility that can progress to workplace crime. The dissertation ends by encouraging all individuals to speak out, act on it right away, and be your hero. This degree credential provides the researcher and music artist more opportunities to save lives. Dr. Moore gives God all the glory, all the honor, and all the praise: as Sister Tracey Pryor would say because nothing is possible without God. God Rest Her Soul, for she is Loved.

“Victoria Mull”

Why is Music Education Important?

First, as a child who went to Norwin School District, we had a string program. My Mother's family is somewhat musical. However, my Grandfather Stephen Kupec played music "by ear." He could play any instrument, but he mainly played the violin. I never met my Grandfather; he passed away before I was born.

When the Strings instrumental family was introduced in third grade, I decided to play the viola because my Father's sister is Viola. When I made the announcement at home, I found out my father had played the violin as a boy.

That is why I chose my instrument; however, there is more to the story.

I was a shy child. Introverted. My mother didn't know what to do with me. My Father passed away when I was 12. She heard about a music camp at Seton Hill University. She enrolled me there, and I found my calling. I had struggled in school before this camp came along. I didn't have confidence, and I didn't have very good study skills. That included music. I found my mentors at the camp. Mary Volker and Nancy Gorinsky kept me focused within those two weeks. I blossomed as a violinist.

When I returned to school, I continued to study. The big payoff was that I picked up skills that improved my grades and confidence in my studies. First of all, my musical skills improved. I literally shocked my orchestra Teacher because I had applied myself to become a better musician. I had gained the confidence to join festivals and join the chorus. I started writing and reading. I even achieved the highest history grade in my class. I graduated with a Bachelor of Music Education from Seton Hill University. My biggest achievement was being elected Editor-in-Chief of the "Setonian," the University Newspaper.

“Matt Klumpp”

Question One: When has music meant the world to you?

“In 2019 I was hired to play for a Pennsylvania Lottery television commercial, which aired statewide on NBC, CBS and ABC. Whenever he would watch a football game, my Dad would eventually hear me playing because that commercial would be aired during most of the games. Even though he lives several hundred miles away in Philadelphia, the music that I played still reached him. Music is a universal phenomenon that unites people across all places and times, and my Dad listening to me play in that TV commercial was a good reminder of that fact,” - Matt Klumpp.

Question Two: Why is Music Education Important?

“Music Education, along with all Arts Education, is important because learning the arts brings us closer to what makes us truly human. Much in the way I am sure athletes looking back on their younger days remember certain games, bonds of friendship between teammates, and coaches who inspired them,. When I think back on my education most of my fondest memories are of concerts, marching band or drum corps shows, and the family-like relationship between members of certain musical ensembles. Someone who learns music will have that ability for the rest of their life, and that will come to define a part of them as a person unique to that individual,” - Matt Klumpp.

2021 MUSIC NEWSLETTER

“The Music Man”

Question One: Tell me about the time when music meant the world to you and why?

Music became important to me when I was very young. My grandfather would take my brother and me to the high school football field to see the band practice. The Leechburg High School practiced at lunch time during the day. There I saw those shiny instruments and heard the music up close. It got to me. In my primary years in the Gilpin Elementary school, I was just a number, but I liked music class and excelled in it. I loved sports but I hurt my hand when I was a baby, so that prevented me from doing some things in sports. Music gave me an identity. In fourth grade, I started to play the trumpet. I took group lessons with the music teachers once a week for half an hour. We also had an elementary band that played two times a week. I really enjoyed that and worked very hard practicing.

In seventh grade, I switched to drums. The same teacher I had in elementary school was my percussion teacher. He was a violinist but knew the basics of percussion. For two years I played trumpet in the band, but in my third year, I was good enough to play snare drum in the high school band. That was my life. It gave me a purpose in life. Another important aspect of my musical inspiration was singing in the local community chorus. It was a Black choir with about fifty members and we sang standard choral literature, gospel, and spirituals. My brother and I were the youngest members in the group. There I learned a strong appreciation for choral literature. That is where I saw my first black conductor, professional organist, and piano players. Those two things gave me my desire to become a music teacher.

Question Two: Is music education important?

Yes. Music Education is important. Listed below are the academic reasons telling us why music education is important and beneficial to students.

1. A Music Education program provides an aesthetic experience for its students. Often, students will utilize music as an outlet for expression that is sometimes unavailable to them in other academic areas.
2. Musical experiences will provide the students with opportunities for emotional response, which often encourages the cognitive processes.
3. Music Education instills “life values” in students. Some of these include; discipline, cooperation, social skills, and building good character. Knowledge of music technology, music history, music theory, and music culture will reinforce knowledge in other academic subjects as well.
4. Music will often create a sense of school spirit, which will in turn provide the students with a sense of self-worth which will almost always reflect a positive attitude.
5. A good Music Education program will aid any school district in the direction to obtain the highest level of achievement and excellence deemed possible.
6. Music Education develops all three academic domains: cognitive, physical, and emotional skills.

All of those statements are important, but music gives students the opportunity to achieve goals every time they play. It gives them a place to belong. It provides a student with instant feedback if they are doing it correctly. Music is all around us. It is a part of our life. If you want to test it, get in your car with no music, go to a football game with no music, go to a wedding with no music, a funeral, a movie, a date, the dentist, get on an elevator, etc. It is all around us. If you take away the music, the world suffers.

An Extraordinary Piece

Johannes Brahms is a German Romantic Pianist and Composer. He was obsessed with his compositions and worked relentlessly. Disciplined, he contained his emotionalism through an articulated and structured form.

His composition, "Piano Quintet in F minor, op. 34," is incredibly brilliant! Nikesha encourages all, to listen. "Those are miracles that no merely human brain can work. The artist is merely the sound conduct of a Force, that dictates to him what he should do," ~ Brahms.

Quote of The Day

"There is only one duty, only one safe course, and that is to try to be right and not to fear to do or say what you believe to be right," ~ Sir Winston Churchill.

Thoughts of Music

- "I would rather write 10,000 notes than a single letter of the alphabet," ~ Ludwig van Beethoven.
- "Beethoven tells you what it's like to be Beethoven and Mozart tells you what it's like to be human. Bach tells you what it's like to be the universe," ~ Douglas Adams.

Nikesha Moore's Fun Fact

Nikesha is excited to share with you that she has adopted a Pittsburgh Zoo animal and you can too. By adopting an Amur Tiger, Nikesha supports the zoo's conservation efforts. Adopting provides food, care and enrichment for these animals. An Amur Tiger could live 10 - 12 years in the wild, but in our local Pittsburgh zoo, they can live 20-22 years.

So, why has Nikesha adopted an Amur Tiger? It's a big cat that lives in harsh climates with very cold temperatures and very deep snow. Amur Tigers are commonly found in Russian and Asia. There are not many left. There are only 300- 400 left in the wild.

These endangered species that weigh 200 - 700 pounds in weight are endangered due to poaching and deforestation. Choose your favorite Pittsburgh zoo animal and support the Pittsburgh Zoo's Conservation efforts. If you are an animal lover as Nikesha, click here: <https://www.pittsburghzoo.org/Adopt-An-Animal>

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital

Nikesha, as a volunteer, had a rewarding opportunity to bring cheer to the children, families, and staff of St. Jude Research Hospital on Monday, December 4th, 2017. She felt overjoyed to see a child with pony-tails swinging around in circles and skipping to the song she played the piano too and sang, called, "Jingle Bells."

Danny Thomas envisioned and built St. Jude, as a place children can be treated for a cure and never worry about a bill. Nikesha invites you to support their cause in finding cures for children with cancer and life-threatening illnesses. To donate, visit: <https://stjude.org/donate>. To learn ways to help, visit: www.stjude.org.

A Music Accomplishment

Nikesha has always wanted to learn to play the white and black keys on the piano; it fascinated her as a child. Cindy K. Borbonus, her Piano Teacher, would brisk her fingers over the keys making an incredible sound. The vibrations of the piano would echo until her fingers no longer moved. Each and every day, she is grateful and thankful to her parents, Reed L. Moore and Earnestine Moore, both whom started her first piano lesson at the tender age of seven.

Today, Nikesha shares and announces that through study, hard-work, and dedication, she has earned a Minor in Music Theory from Susquehanna University. Her celebration certainly includes a sincere, 'Thank You,' to her parents, supporters, and all of her teachers whom have encouraged her every step of the way.

Nikesha Moore

Nikesha has always found classical music to be her favorite. Although Beethoven is her all time favorite classical composer: she thoroughly enjoys the minor notes written within a scale by Chopin in the Romantic era.

"Simplicity is the highest goal, achievable when you have overcome all difficulties. After one has played a vast quantity of notes and more notes, it is simplicity that emerges as the crowning reward of art," - Chopin.

Nikesha and Earnestine Moore extend a special thank you to First United Methodist Church for the opportunity to sing and play the piano to gospel songs during the Ekklesia Service on Saturday, February 3rd, 2018. Reverend Jill Croushore

Happy Valentine's Day

A Family Saved

This is a small fragment of Nikesha's history. Nikesha was told that her great great great grandmother lived in the South. Nikesha's great great great grandmother's name was Julia Wilson Brown; her and her husband were sharecroppers. A sharecropper worked the land, such as farming.

This is the way they lived. Sharecroppers earned their living by farming the land. This would give them food and a place to stay.

Her and her husband, over a period of years, there would be born to this union three daughters: Anna, Teal, and Emma, who was the youngest daughter.

As the sharecroppers worked the fields in the heat of the day. Eventually, the word came down that the sharecroppers were now free people.

They could go anywhere they wanted or they could stay.

The plantation owners got word that the sharecroppers were free. Because the sharecroppers worked the field, the plantation owners did not want them to leave. This means that the plantation owners would not have anyone to work their fields. This caused an uproar among the plantation owners and the sharecroppers. This is when the plantation owners came out with their guns and rifles and started shooting the sharecroppers. The sharecroppers were defenceless, because they had nothing to defend themselves against guns. The sharecroppers only had sticks as weapons to defend themselves. This was no match for guns or rifles.

After the shooting started, Nikesha's great great great grandmother took Emma the youngest daughter and hid her in a hollow tree log and told her to stay there and she'll be back for her after dark. Then, she took hold of her two oldest daughters hands (Anna and Teal) and ran to escape the shooting.

She returned to get her youngest daughter Emma and this was the last time she ever saw or heard of her husband.

This is the same story that was told several times over and over again by Cousin Hattie Gulff.

2017 SECOND MUSIC NEWSLETTER

Nikesha Moore's Native American Ancestry

Nikesha Moore is reading the book called, "Indian Nations of North America," printed by the National Geographic in Washington, D.C. Nikesha was deeply heartbroken and shocked as she read and learned about the 1838 Trail of Tears.

In the mid 1500's Cherokee Indians controlled Southwestern Virginia to the Carolinas, to Northern Georgia, to Eastern Tennessee, and to Northeastern Alabama. In 1829, gold was found in Georgia, therefore the state demanded the federal government to remove the Cherokees. There were 7,000 troops ordered to evict them. "More than 16,000 Cherokee were forced west during 1838-39. As many as 4,000 died on the way," (p. 83). The Cherokee lost what they called their homelands. "The federal government did not honor the treaty and initiated forced removal of all tribal members to Indian Territory," (p. 85). The Cherokee were made to walk thousands of miles (Trail of Tears) to what is now called Oklahoma.

Sadly, the Cherokee had no time to gather belongings or savor any items. Their animals and homeland were all taken from them. "While most southeastern Indians ended up in Oklahoma, many remained in their homelands, attempting to make new lives and retain their traditions. Those who remained faced state-sanctioned racism, such as the harassment the Choctaw experienced as Mississippi citizens in the mid-1800's. In the mid-1900's, Virginia bureaucrats classified Indians as "colored" on birth certificates and then enforced Jim Crow segregation... Indians in the Southeast were regularly denied access to healthcare and higher education until the 1960's," (p. 71). Nikesha is sharing this story with you today, because she is Cherokee Indian.

The information printed in the National Geographic book engaged Nikesha and gave her a wealth of knowledge. When Christopher Columbus reached the Americas in 1492, the book stated, "he met people unknown to Europeans," (p. 12). The book continued stating, "These days, we acknowledge that schools have grossly misinformed students about Native American history. This happened because colonizing powers always interpret events from their own perspective. It is hard for a colonial power that is still occupying territory to be objective about how it achieved dominance. At the time of contact, Native people were already familiar with issues of cross-cultural identities, economies, slavery, war, and competition for resources; these were not new and were not introduced by Europeans. However, the introduction of Europeans increased these complexities, and the subjugation of indigenous peoples made it possible to silence their voices," (p. 304).

The federal government today recognizes 589 Indian tribes and they are eligible to receive services from the U. S. Bureau of Indian Affairs. The Cherokee Indian tribe is the largest tribe in the United States. Additionally, the Cherokee National Holiday is celebrated every Labor Day weekend in Oklahoma, every year, with 80,000 to 90,000 Cherokee citizens attending.

This story is not shared to bring about violence in anyway. We cannot undue the past or bring back the lives that were lost. The Cherokee Indians are a people of principal and they are very spiritual people. Therefore, we can make this right by sharing true facts. I believe Americas foundation was built on injustice, inequality, and racism. Therefore, we must work diligently together as a Nation, including all races, ethnicities, and cultures to bridge the gap. Bridge the gap by creating a world to bring about morale, fairness, equality, and peace together. Let us never erase the truth. Let us embrace it to improve and make each of our lives better for the future. When we have truth, we can then have honesty and integrity without effort.

2017 MUSIC NEWSLETTER

Nikesha Moore.

Nikesha has had the opportunity to teach piano to children and adults whom enjoyed playing the piano for personal enjoyment, for enhancement of their skills, for a holiday season, for church events, and for recreational activities. She not only had the chance to share the elements of musical notation through music lessons, but she had a chance to provide a supportive environment which focused on building their confidence with consistent encouragement. Practicing the piano every day helps the students begin to master the piano. The importance of notation technique cannot be emphasized enough. Once music has been written, it must be easily read, "musicians have to be able to read the music at first pass (called sight reading), which means it helps to follow certain established parameters. There's no point in being unique if nobody can read our music!" (Miller, p. 241). The fulfillment of teaching students is not that the students have learned from Nikesha, but that Nikesha, herself, has learned from them.

A Love Story

To live an extraordinary life of a man with extraordinary ideas would be one blessing in of itself. However, to have the power to free music and let your music become a strong magnet for all the people in the world to escape their misery is a golden treasure without a price tag. A young boy, abused, ridiculed and born into poverty, grew into one of the largest icons in his time of the seventeenth century and his name still rings century's later in the early year of 2017. He is a man of great astute and great power. His name is Beethoven, as he is known as the man who freed music. He loved dearly two of his students that married a nobleman or state official. Someone in higher rank during that time than Beethoven. Beethoven created two master pieces dedicated to two loves. Moonlight Sonata was written for Countess Giulietta Guicciardi and Fur Elise was dedicated to Therese Malfatti. Beethoven's childhood friend, Dr. Webgeloer said, "There was never a time...when Beethoven was not in love and that in the highest degree," (Schauffler, p. 99). Beethoven, a musical genius that Nikesha admires, because he triumphed his way to the sky with no limits, to music with no limits, and to love with no limits.

What Is This Concert Really About?

This Concert is not about Nikesha Moore. It is about GOD first. Why? NM is showcasing the Gift God gave her. Through God, NM was given 15 songs as neither a single note or rest was written anywhere as her fingers glided across the keys. This music expresses sadness, love, happiness, mixed feelings, extreme emotions, pain, sorrow, hope, the piano, the voice, the connection of the body, the mind, and the soul. Last, but not least...MUSIC HEALS.

What Has Mozart Said About Music?

Music is not the tones. It is not the notes. Music is the silence between the notes.

Nikesha Moore.

It is never too late to change your life. One of the greatest songs on my first album is the last song. Why? Because you can change. Be the best person you can be and if you do what you love... as Confucius, a Chinese philosopher stated, "You will never work a day in your life."

Thank You Concert Sponsors
