What are Creative Arts Therapies?

Creative Art Therapy is a profession that uses active engagement in the arts to address mental, emotional, developmental, and behavioral disorders by providing a medium for expression. Through various arts modalities, individuals are known to improve psychomotor and sensory impairments, increase interaction among peers, and use more authentic communication. These improvements can have a significant impact on the individual and their relationship with family, peers, and coworkers.

"For children and youth, the creative arts therapeutic approach provides an opportunity for guided creativity, social skills, and self-direction & discovery in a safe and supportive environment. It is an opportunity for sharing regardless of abilities and builds a network of support with peers. I am so grateful for MJKids!" – J. Griffin, parent of a teen with Asperger's

Creative Arts Therapists are board certified and or licensed psychotherapy practitioners with master's level education and specialized training. Please visit www.marblejamkids.org for staff bios.

MarbleJam Kids Center for Creative Arts Therapy & Enrichment is a state authorized service provider with the NJ Department of Children & Families, NJ Dept. of Special Education and NJ DDD.
