

What is my response?

“Let each of you look not to your own interests, but to the interests of others.” In this season of devastating hurricanes and the earthquake in Mexico, I am sure that many of us have breathed a sigh of relief that we have not suffered as so many have from these natural occurrences. At the same time we have ‘felt’ the pain of the people who have suffered as we watched our TV screens or read the newspaper; they are suffering and who will continue to suffer for months and years to come. But can I truly say that I have suffered with them? Has my life changed in any way since these events? St. Paul’s words above imply that something should have changed if I have placed their interests over my own. In some form or other, I should be more conformed to Jesus as a result of my response.

St. Paul’s description of Jesus’ response to our human condition includes these phrases: “... emptied himself, taking the form of a slave”, “... humbled himself and became obedient to the point of ... death on a cross.” Have I in any way emptied myself in my response? I am sure we have all prayed for the victims of these events, but, beyond prayer, beyond words, what have I done? We notice that the words Paul uses in describing Jesus’ response to us are all verbs, they are action words; Jesus did something, he does something, but now he does it through us. Jesus calls us to imitate him in emptying ourselves of our preoccupations – power, possessions, prestige – and to do for others, humbly and obediently.

We find the same call in the gospel of today - two sons, one says ‘no’ but then does what his father asked of him while the second says ‘yes’ and does nothing. People in need everywhere, at home and abroad, are calling out to us, calling us to ‘empty ourselves’, to ‘humble ourselves’, to ‘become obedient’ and in doing so to live out the words of the gospel, to do the will of the Father by helping out in God’s vineyard. What is my ‘yes’, what is my work in the vineyard of the Lord?

What makes a good Facilitator/Coach for Faith Development?

- ◇ Rooted in our faith
- ◇ Comfortable speaking to a group
- ◇ Friendly welcoming personality
- ◇ Ability to keep the group engaged but also bring them back on topic when required
- ◇ Being organized and properly prepared for each session
- ◇ Some knowledge of setting up laptop to projector and use of Power Point would be helpful

All sessions and Power Point slides are completely prepared for the facilitator and provided to them at least a week ahead of time. All items required for the session (snacks, crafts, handouts, etc.) are provided and placed in a container to be put out prior to the session.

The only requirements we ask of the facilitator are:

- ◇ To be fully prepared by reading over the session and running thru the PP prior to each session
- ◇ To be at each session at least ½ hour prior to the start time in order to have the equipment, handouts, etc. set up before the families arrive so they can greet the families as they come in.
- ◇ To be welcoming and provide a comfortable atmosphere for the
